against the stock-holders and policy-holders. After giving an account of the peculiar manner in which the company did business, which finally ended in bankruptcy about two years ago, the receiver says the liabilities of the company at the time of its failure were about $587,000, while the total assets are only in the neighborhood of $100,000. At the time the receiver took possession, there had been assessments for $253,000 made, and nearly all collected, and there are still $324,000 accruing on death losses as to which no steps had been taken for collection. By the terms of the policy each policy-holder is liable for all assessments accruing while his policy is in force, and the receiver thinks this amount, or so much of it as can be, should be collected. An order was made by Judge Blodgett calling on all the
