

CANTO NINTH.

STANZA XVIII.

" And in the bright hunting grounds waiting him, he Was scenting the feast of the strawberry."

When an Iroquois is dying with a calm and tranquil countenance, those around him say, " he is scenting the strawberry of the Great Spirit !"

