The merchant takes a long step towards successful retailing when he installs an elevator

Whether he sells dry goods, groceries, stoves or haberdashery-every merchant nowadays has an actual, imperative need for a freight elevator.

When goods arrive and pile up on the ground floor, it is of the utmost importance that the merchant be able to at once transfer this new stock upstairs where it will be out of the way and convenient of access at the same time.

Nothing repels people quicker than a slipshod, untidy-looking store or store front, due to the accumulation of surplus stock or empty packing cases. Orders are frequently delayed because clerks have to spend much time carrying goods upstairs when they should be attending to deliveries, dressing the windows or making the store look more attractive.

No system yet devised will induce the habit of tidiness and facilitate order and economical handling of stock like the use of an Otis-Fensom elevator.

OTIS FENSOM FREIGHT

Its ready convenience and ease of operation form a direct incentive to keep your ground floor inviting and to use all that ground floor for salesmanship and attractive display. It enables you to "have a place for everything and everything in its place," increases the efficiency of your clerks, reduces expenses. f your clerks, reduces expenses, and makes people want to deal with you because your place "looks so clean." Of course many merchants have no need for a belted elevator, something smaller and lighter being sufficient for all their needs. We make a Hand Power Elevator admirably suited for such cases. Its improved steel roller bearings make its operait has the advantage that you can install it anywhere. The new can install it anywhere. The new powerful brake will stop and hold the car at any point, however heavily loaded, and the many safety features should commend it to the merchant whose space and help are limited.
