

HEARST CATSPAW FOR WILY MURPHY?

Unfathomable Compact Between
Sworn Enemies Baffles
Old Politicians.

New York, Oct. 7.—There never were two more incongruous political running mates than William Randolph Hearst and Charles F. Murphy. They seem to be going at the present time in the same general direction, but they are manifestly under the control of different drivers, and no one knows just how long they will be able to run in trot, or walk, or whatever their gait may develop to be, in the same direction.

Politics always brings curious alliances and strange combinations. Men don't get ahead in that line of activity unless they are willing to forget past differences and conduct their affairs on a series of compromises. But the Hearst-Murphy alliance is not a compromise and is not an alliance. Apparently, each was willing to accept the help of the other at the Buffalo convention, and although they had totally different aims in view, each profited by the combination, and neither lost anything.

It is still a mystery just how much of actual combination there may be between the two, although it is rapidly coming to be believed there is none at all, and that they are travelling along in the same direction temporarily because it happens to serve the convenience of each. There are good grounds for believing that Hearst and Murphy may part definitely before the campaign is over, and yet on the other hand it would surprise no one if the combination should prove extremely formidable.

Old politicians in both parties are completely mystified by the so-called Hearst-Murphy alliance has any more than one of the three dimensions of length, breadth and thickness, it worked like a charm at Buffalo. Confronted delegations were thrown out until Hearst had control of the convention and Murphy had control of the state central committee.

It was supposed that after that time the two men necessarily would become close political allies, in spite of their former bitter enmity, following the usual fashion of politicians in days gone by. But the present campaign is being organized and managed on totally different principles. Mr. Hearst is as independent of Murphy as if that gentleman was not in existence, and as to the state central committee, which usually controls the slightest details of a candidate's life during a hot campaign, he has seen fit to ignore it almost entirely.

In point of fact, Mr. Hearst, who was nominated to the dismay of the old time Democrats at the Buffalo convention, is now performing through the state, under the personal direction of the Independence League, the organization which put him into the field long before the campaign at Buffalo. The Democrats state central committee has been absolutely no control over the candidate for governor. It has not even been consulted as to his exact itinerary and the chairman of the committee, a Buffalo gentleman, known as "Finky" Connors, who is certain to become picturesque in the campaign, has hesitated to admit that Mr. Hearst had come up state, outside the direction of the committee, and under control of "them Independence League fellows."

At Buffalo Hearst and Murphy drove along like a double screw marine engine. Almost his first act in the campaign was to declare that Mr. Hearst, who while Murphy might be for him, he was not for Murphy. In ordinary politics this would start a row between the two chiefs, but it seems to have done nothing of the kind, and Mr. Murphy, with a laugh, says: "Mr. Hearst will have to do his own thinking."

It is the most elastic alliance ever known in this city and until the Republican managers can solve its extent and find out how far it will stand the test of repeated attacks from different directions, they will be unable to determine whether it is an alliance at all or a more convenient form of interest which seems to lead two men of totally different instincts along the same path at the same time.

There were many rumors afloat here today that Murphy had played a characteristic confidence game on Hearst, and that when the votes were counted it would be found that Tammany Hall had in the best possible manner resented many force attacks upon the personality of its leader made by the present Democratic candidate for governor. These rumors say with some circumstantiality that Murphy used Hearst at Buffalo for his own purpose, and that those having now been secured, he proposes to let the candidate go as rapidly downward as he can, his course being delayed only long enough to secure the necessary percentage of the large campaign fund which Mr. Hearst is expected to contribute to the regular campaign.

Stories of coming treachery on the part of Tammany Hall are common to almost every campaign. It is a necessary incident to the character of that organization. Tammany was organized for plunder. It makes little difference when the votes were counted, it would be found that Tammany Hall had in the best possible manner resented many force attacks upon the personality of its leader made by the present Democratic candidate for governor. ## SUNNY SEPTEMBER IN OLD ONTARIO

Dominion Government's Monthly
Review of the Weather
in This Province.

Toronto, Oct. 7.—September weather in this Province was marked by an excessive amount of bright sunshine, a deficiency of precipitation in most districts, and by unusually high maximum temperatures. A few light frosts were experienced in some localities on or about the 1st, 15th and 24th; but, except on the last-named date, no material lakings ensued. The rainfall occurred, for the most part, during the last week of the month, and, in consequence, fall plowing and seeding was much delayed. The following reports have been received:

Port Arthur—Lakes normal, crops safely gathered, no frosts to injure vegetation, trees still in leaf, but turning color from age.

Gravenhurst—No frost to hurt the tenderest plants at this station, but in lower situations and distant from the lakes tender vegetation was cut off on the 1st. The month has been remarkably fine, but rather too dry in the early half. The foliage has been remarkably abundant, and is still untouched by the usual autumn colors. Climate—Month very dry until 29th; pastures dry and bare; fall wheat coming up in spots; humming birds seen on the 16th; forest leaves beginning to fade; 1½ inches of rain on the 29th.

Brimar—Foliage on trees is still green and abundant; no frost up to the end of the month; rain much needed. London—Not enough frost to cut down plant life.

Stony Creek—There will be great loss in winter apples this fall caused by the fruit dropping before ripening.

Georgetown—Fall plowing and seeding generally delayed for want of rain until the latter part of the month.

Sutton West—Harvest generally well saved; potatoes poor crop and small, much rot in most places.

Port Hope—Sowing of fall wheat finished; much fine and warm, leaves starting to fall.

Arden—The month of September has been hot and dry, many wells failed. Rain fell on five days only, most of the rain came the last week, which has replenished the wells and will help fall pasture.

It was supposed that after that time the two men necessarily would become close political allies, in spite of their former bitter enmity, following the usual fashion of politicians in days gone by. But the present campaign is being organized and managed on totally different principles. ## SHOT AT ALTAR ON WEDDING DAY

Murderer Surrenders to Police
After Eluding Their Vigilance for 18 Years.

Dublin, Oct. 7.—A man who shot his brother-in-law at the altar on his wedding day has just surrendered to the County Armagh police at Market Hill, after eluding the vigilance of the authorities for eighteen years.

The motive of the crime was vengeance, and the murder was committed under circumstances that have frequently figured in dramatic novels. A sister of the assailant, a man named William Thompson, had married a neighbor named Thomas Thompson. The marriage was an unhappy one, and upon the death of the woman William Thompson asserted that his sister's end had been brought about by the husband's ill-treatment, and his resentment was further increased when the husband neglected to attend the funeral.

Some time later Thomas Thompson arranged to be married again at the parish church of Portadown, and William Thompson took a vow of vengeance. Strolling into the church with a gun as the ceremony was proceeding, he took a deliberate aim at the bridegroom as he was standing at the altar, and shot him dead.

The assailant quietly submitted to capture, and at the trial behaved with great coolness and self-satisfaction. He conducted his own defense, received the sentence of death with great composure, and before his removal delivered a long speech to the jury.

The murder and trial caused intense excitement throughout Ireland, and soon after the sentence was commuted to one of penal servitude for life. While in prison Thompson was declared to be insane, and was removed to the lunatic asylum at Dundrum. From that institution he managed to escape soon after his admission, in the spring of 1888, and since that time he has been again by the authorities until he surrendered himself a couple of days ago.

That night the ship was sedately plowing her way through the waters, when a most unearthly racket broke out from below, and before the startled crew knew what it was all about the decks and rigging became black with rushing monkeys. Some of the crew rushed below to the cages, and Chang, cowering from one to the other, they had all been fastened with the same simple device, and having found out how to open one, Chang had set about opening them all, and had just flung the last door open when the men from on deck appeared.

Then began a monkey hunt which was to last for three days and nights. The monkeys seemed to enjoy it more than did their Chinese hunters. Their chief points of attack were the queues of their foes, and dropping from rat-line or stay plump on a Chinaman's shoulders, they would seize the coiled pigtail and yank it down, scratching and clawing all the time. Thirty-six of the monkeys were eventually secured, but 14 were killed in the melee, or jumped overboard to avoid capture.

There it was found that the hermit was a retired tradesman, named Charles Redde, who suffered from religious mania, and frequently disappeared from his family to live alone in extraordinary places.

He had lived in the tomb for ten days, going out daily for a small supply of food.

The keepers had noticed him going about, but had paid little attention to him, supposing that he was mourning at some grave.

MONKEY MUTINEERS ATTACK CREW

Simians Pulled Pigtails of Chinamen and Scratched Them—Fourteen Simians Killed.

New York, Oct. 7.—There was mutiny on board the steamship Lowther Castle, which arrived here yesterday from far eastern ports, mutiny that lasted two days and two nights. Before it was quelled, the mutineers were safe in the hold, 14 of them had paid the penalty with their lives, and their bodies were thrown to the fishes.

When the Lowther Castle, Captain William Lightoller, flying the British flag, sailed from Yokohama on June 29 with a Chinese crew, the officers did not believe that there would be trouble. All went well until after the ship left Singapore on Aug. 10, and was out in the Indian Ocean well on her way to Port Said.

At Singapore the dumbwaiter men and other traders had come alongside with monkeys, and when the vessel sailed there were 20 of them stowed in the hold, to say nothing of two fine ring-tailed Simians that Wing Kee, the cook, had in a cage in the galley.

In a few days the cook thought that his two monkeys were pining, and Kiki, the female, was released. She immediately made a dash for the cage of her human companion, and the pair chattered so much and so long that it was finally decided to let both go free.

Entering the Indian Ocean, the freighter soon after ran into a storm, accompanied with much thunder and more lightning. To appease the deities of the storm the Chinese begged the captain to let them set off fireworks, and he assented.

The two monkeys were badly scared, and Kiki, jumping from the rail, fell into the sea. Her mate, Chang, saw what had happened, scrambled down the rigging, danced up and down the rail, and then leaping aloft in the rigging, where he clung on to a backstay and watched the little black spot drifting astern until it was lost to view.

One of the Chinese sailors was sent aloft to bring Chang back to the deck, but the monkey attacked him so violently that he made a hurried descent to the deck. Others were sent on the same mission, but they f
