Lloyd Harris Admits He May Have Misunderstood Col. Carnegie's Intent.

HE WAS SUSPICIOUS

Harris Thought Possibly Carnegie Was Given Instructions From "Higher Up."

By a Staff Reporter.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 9.—The royal commission investigating the Kyté charges against the old shell committee got nearer the crux of the situation today than at any previous hearing.

Lloyd Harris of the Russell Motor Car Company, whose statement of complaints to the prime minister was at least in some measure responsible for the enquiry, was on the stand most of the forenoon and the whole of the afternoon.

Mr. Harris gave evidence of a startling character. He said he went to Montreal to interview the shell committee and saw Col. David Carnegie, who discouraged him right there.

"The upshot of the whole thing," Mr. Harris said, "that I was told that if I wanted to make fuses I would have to go to Col. Allison."

WAR SUMMARY

THE DAY'S EVENTS REVIEWED

FOUR unsuccessful attempts were made by the Germans to capture French positions about Hill 304, northwest of Verdun, yesterday and the night before last.

Altho the losses of the Germans in these attacks are enormous, seeing that they all fall and the beaten troops have to pass thru the fire zone twice, yet owing to the narrow frontage of the attacks, their casualties are nothing like what they were in the opening stage of the fighting in this sector.

Hints have been thrown out by some French army leaders that the reckless way in which the Germans are continuing their offensive about Verdun foreshadows a grand smash-up.

Germans Will Henceforth Be Blocked by British Sea Power.

By a Staff Reporter.

LONDON, May 9, 9:05 p.m.—A. J. Balfour, first lord of the admiralty, in a letter to the German admirals on the east and south coast, foreboding changes in the disposition of Great Britain's naval forces, which are likely to prevent in the future German raiding squadrons from escaping severe punishment.

Mr. Balfour says that the net results of such busy attacks on unfortified towns are "singularly futile."
