THE BRITISH HOLDING GAINS

British front in France, July 14-10 p.m., via London, July 15.—At the end of a long day's unbroken struggle, the indications are that the British are holding their gains of the morning, when, along a front of about four miles, they attacked the German second line and captured a little before dawn, anticipated a most determined resistance and expected to pay a high toll in casualties.

Their experiences during many nights of trench raids had served as excellent preparation for their dawn assault where co-ordination was of the greatest importance. An unexpectedly small number of wounded came into the clearing stations during the morning hours. Many were borne by German prisoners who acted as litter bearers.

A SURPRISE

These prisoners said that no attack had been expected and that the assault before daylight came as a complete surprise. The British retained part possession in the Trones wood where the Germans had previously regained part possession. Through the tangle and over fallen tree trunks they swept in the face of persistent sniping and machine gun fire under conditions where it was considered amazing when they could discern friend from foe.

The Germans, building barricades and digging for shelter among rocks, refused to yield, confident that coming counter attacks would force them to retreat. Among them were wounded who, unable to stand, still could fire their rifles. The British advance was made on a frontal sweep up a slope into the German trenches and the villages of Bazentin-Le-Petit, Bazentin-Le-Grand and Bazentin.

At this hour tonight it appears that there is only one point in the German trenches where the machine guns have not been put out of action and demolished completely.

For a space of 200 yards the British swept past a section of the trench where the Germans, refusing to yield, held out desperately for some time, in a fashion characteristic of the fighting on the Somme.

Some of the prisoners taken today belonged to a battalion from different divisions rushed to the scene since July 1. They seemed to lack the usual efficient organization.

Beyond Second Line. Where the British found the going good they carried their attack beyond the second line, taking guns and more prisoners and seeking to gain high points on the ridge. Against these advance parties the Germans began to develop stronger resistance.

The success of the morning has won for the British a depth of three or four miles of terrain since July 1. This means also commanding British positions which obviously conform the German line in the Thiepval sector to a bad salient.

Virtually all the objectives were captured today in less than an hour. Two German colonels and a regimental staff and other prisoners found themselves in British hands before daylight had fairly broken.

REVIEW OF THE OPERATIONS

London, July 15.—(Toronto Mail and Empire cable.)—The correspondent of the Daily News at British headquarters in London, under date of July 15, in reviewing the preparations for yesterday's advance, mentions the persistent shelling of the German main and second line beyond Contalmaison and the Mametz wood, and also the solid and rapid progress at Ovillers.

"The British," he says, "pushing in from both sides, made a junction in Ovillers. We hold the west, north-west and southern parts. The Germans are being driven back from the high ground on the eastern side of the town, to which we have not yet been able to carry. From this position machine guns command a stretch of the lower ground beyond."

"More important than any actual movement has been the heavy pounding to which we have been subjected by the German front line trenches on this part of our new front."

Review of Operations

In the course of a long review of the operations since July 7, the correspondent says: "We so far have been, in general, pushing up a slightly rising slope to a low plateau, the whole distance being full of hollows and studded all over with little clumps of woodland. The Mametz wood. The open ground is everywhere sown with trenches arranged as cunningly as the Germans can arrange them to cope with just such an advance as has taken place."

"Everywhere, at the connections between trenches and commanding strong points, machine gun positions and strong points have been made, the whole being a carefully interlocked and connected system of defensive positions, every one of which is commanded from a greater or lesser number of others. There has been hardly a point we have taken from which an advance has been possible except under the fire of some other position not more than fifty yards away."

"One feature of the operations has been the difficulty owing to weather. In the earlier days of the advance the heat was extreme. It was very hard to get water to the men in front and they suffered from heat stroke."

Another Big Push On Extreme West?

London, July 15.—(Toronto Mail and Empire cable.)—On the French portion of the Somme front no action of importance was recorded, but in the French official statement for Friday it was announced that the bombardment of German positions by the Belgian front had reached a point of the greatest intensity. The announcement receives additional significance, for more than a week the Belgians have reported a bombardment directed against the German fortifications.

These announcements were similar to those made by the British preceding the opening of their great offensive, and may possibly indicate that another big movement by the Belgians may be attempted at the extreme western end of the battle.
