	The Upper Canada Provincial Exhibition appears to have been remarkably successful. The number of tickets sold was about forty thousand, notwithstanding the exceedingly un- favorable weather. The papers tell us that "The show of stock was better than ever be- fore. Horses, cattle, sheep, pigs, and poultry with all in advance of former years. Almost without exception the animals shown were excellent. The show of roots and vegetables was even better than on any previous occasion. In grain, our farmers have so long excelled that they could hardly improve much upon the high reputation which Upper Canada wheat and barley already hold. The excellence of the show of fruit and the grapes was especially gratifying. One gentleman exhibited no less than thirty eight varieties of out door grapes grown by him. Not only was the show of bees, bee hives and honey better, but the interest excited by the bee exhibitors was one of the features of the Exhibition.

WORK AND PLAY.

Work while you work, and play while you play:
That is the way to be cheerful and gay.
All that you do, do with your might;
Things done by halves are never done right.
One thing each time, and that done well,
Is a very good rule, as many can tell.
Moments are useless trifled away,
So work while you work, and play while you play.

TO LET.

To be let at a very delicate rate.
A snug little house in a fine, healthy state, "Tis a bachelor's heart, and the agent is discreet.
Affection the rent to be paid in advance.
The owner, as yet, has possessed it alone, So the fixtures are not of much value; but soon
'Twill be furnished by Cupid himself, if a wife
Take a lease for the term of her natural life.
The tenement will have a few taxes to pay Love, honor, and—leave it them—obey.
As for the coal—will the owner's in-lined To have that, if agreeable, settled in kind.
Provided true title, by proof can be shown To a heart unumbered and free as his own So ladies, dear ladies, pry do not forget, Here's an excellent bachelor's heart to be let.

A Fortunate Kiss.

The following pretty little story is narrated by Frederica Bremer, who vouches for its truthfulness:
In the University of Upsala, in Sweden lived a young student, a noble youth, with great love for studies, but without means for pursuing them. He was poor, without connections. Still he stud-ed, lived in great poverty, but keeping a cheerful heart, and trying to look at the future which looked so grim to him. His good humor and excellent qualities made him beloved by his comrades. One day he was standing at the square with some of them, prattling away an hour of leisure, when the attention of the young man became arrested by a young and elegant lady who by the side of an older one, was slowly walking over the place. It was the daughter of the Governor of Upsala, living in the city, and the lady was her governess. She was generally known for her goodness and gentleness of character, and look-d at with admiration by all the students. As the young man stood gazing at her as she passed, like a graceful vision, one of them suddenly exclaimed: Well, it would be worth something to have a kiss from such a mouth.
The poor student, the hero of our story, who looked on that pure, angelic face, exclaimed, as if by inspiration.
Well, I think I could have it.
Well! cried his friends in a chorus, are you crazy?
Not at all, he answered, but I think she would kiss me if I asked her.
What! in this place—and before all our eyes?
Yes, freely.
Well, if he would give you a kiss in that manner, I will give you a thousand dollars! exclaimed one of the party.
And I, and I, exclaimed three or four others, if it happened that several rich men were in the group, and the bet ran high on so improbable an event. The challenge was made and received in less time than we take to tell it.

his ceasing to speak, she said, blushing, but with great sweetness: If by so little a thing so much can be effected, it would be foolish for me to refuse your request; and publicly in the open square she kissed him.

Next day the student was sent for by the Governor. He wanted to see the man who dared to seek a kiss from his daughter in that way, and whom she consented to kiss.
He received him with a scrutinizing bow, but after an hour's conversation was so pleased with him that he invited him to dine at his

Our young friend pursued his studies in such a manner that it soon made him regard-d as the most promising student in the University.
Three years were now passed since the first kiss, when the young man was allowed to give a second kiss to the daughter of the Governor as his wife.

It became, later, one of the most noted scholars in Sweden, and was much respected for his character. His works will endure while time lasts among the works of science; and from this happy union sprang a family well known in Sweden at the present time, whose wealth and high position in society are regarded as trifles in comparison with its goodness and love.

BURNING OF THE OIL REFINERY AT SARNIA.

VIVID DESCRIPTION OF THE EVENT.

A correspondent writes—Yesterday evening, (Sept. 17), about half past six o'clock, a dense column of heavy black smoke, rising swiftly upwards to the top of the village, announced the startling fact that one of the engines had gone up—away, pell-mell, rushed the adult population, intermingled with fire engines, hose-carts, water carts, and all other of ceteras which make up the bewildering human hurriean which so readily responds to the cry of fire.

It proved to be the extensive refinery known by the title of the "Liverpool Oil Refining Company," but which principally, if not totally, belongs to, and is managed by the Messrs. McKeenzie of Sarnia.
It was an awful and sublime sight, as you approached it in the fast closing night, the heavy surging column of inky smoke first showing a siffon tint, on the orange edges of its billows, then changing to a brown, then swiftly to a scarlet, and almost instantaneously to a fiery brilliant hue which illuminated the landscape for miles around. The vivid brilliance was more like what you perceive in the flash of lightning on a pitch dark night than what the brightest glare of day shows.
I never beheld such a blaze, and I have witnessed fires which devastated acres of city blocks. The combustion of ordinary bit distinguishable in comparison to it. A tank after tank and reservoir after reservoir gave its first to the flames, the fiery furnace seemed to heat with seven fold force. Very soon no eye could bear it, and no being dare to approach it. Such a concentration of pure white flame it is the lot of few to behold—About two acres of the most combustible material known, "all in a row," as the Scotch say, you can readily perceive to be no joke.
Of course every effort was made to stay its progress, but of no avail. The people had just to look on and wonder and now and then at a respectable distance try to outflank it by choking up the drainage communication with the neighboring works. Another refinery within a short distance of it, and a tannery somewhat nearer, were in great danger, and but for the energetic efforts of the fire brigade would have been surely lost. The fire at one time ran along the open ditches where the refinery refuse was discharged as fast as a horse could gallop. You had better believe there was a "skedaddle" in the neighborhood thereof. A crowd had collect-d about some hundreds of yards away from the burning buildings, never dreaming of disturbance till a creeping flame like a snake issued from a culvert, and, like a flash in the pan, set the accumulated oil debris of years in a fiery rage.
I thought that I had before a good idea of the where the wicked go when they die, but it has since last night been vastly improved on.

LOUIS KOSSUTH IN HIS OLD AGE.—An American in Europe furnishes the following sketch of "a shape or shadow rather," visible after taking the Austrian boundaries:—
"It is at the Gate Florian—a man of hair so white that you do not note their thinness, bowed down and meek and silent, yet very kindly-eyed, but never flushed by any period to which he comes, past the young dreams of a grand free state, but waiting yet, though death seems closer than freedom reading—the journal all apart, so respected that not the busiest intruder does more irreverence than look with mild and loving assiduous toward where he sits, alone, aged, very thoughtful—This is Louis Kossuth, the man of glory when I was a little boy, resented, praised, assisted man, whose thought toward our country is childlike yet, although one warm welcome made him to hope too well. I sit in a sort of affectionate fear looking at this grand, almost worn out champion of Hungary. I wonder if God is just and men are more than in-grates in their worship, when I note how long he has lived, in sorrowful indigence a foretold man, whose cannons humbled the Austrian so a little while gone by, and made Kaiser sliver at the forwarding of the degradation now upon him.

And as I see his sunken eyes, white lips, thin hands, half-blindness, groping amid the news for that which will cheer his eye, I remember that the Hungarian element now exceeds the German element by more than two millions. To combine these, a dualistic government is to be continued, as if the South and the North, in America, were called upon to constitute one qualified power with the inevitable fissures at the head. The end of this it is not for me to guess. Who knows that the Magyar may not build deep, strong, and popular, his republic upon the ruins of this ancient empire?"
