MR. CASEY'S BAD BILL.

West Elgin's member, says the Ridgetown Dominion, is showing his regard for farmers by fathering a bill at Ottawa that has been condemned by the municipal representatives of Essex, Kent and Lambton assembled at Chatham. It was the opinion of all present that the sections of the bill dealing with the running of drains under the tracks, and the protection of the farmers from loss by sparks setting fire to their property, were grossly in favor of the railroad companies ved by David Fletcher, sec Messrs. Wilson, Farquharson, Legatt, Ross, Bouteiller and Chinnick be a committee to draft a petition asking for an amendment to the act govern-ing the building of crossings, and drains across railroad property. The petition will also be submitted to the municipal bodies of the several counties of Ontario.

The Tilbury Times in discussing the matter says: "The railway bill intro-duced by Geo. E. Casey, M. P., is one of the most iniquitous pieces of class legislation ever introduced, and if passed will be the means of depriving muni cipalities and individuals of their few remaining rights under the present railway drainage act. The municipal delegates in Chatham on Monday did well to condemn the measure."

The Dominion should find out what trailway passes Geo. E. Casey, carries in his pocket. Of course those would not influence him, but the information would be interesting.

IS OUR BY-LAW SIMILARLY DE-FECTIVE !

In view of the fact that Chatham possesses a transient traders' by-law recent decision in Toronto may b interest. Last year, when Applebe & Co. opened a dry goods business in Windsor, an information was laid against the firm before. Magistrate Bartlet, under the by-law dealing with transient traders. The magistrate de-cided against the firm and a motion was made at Toronto to quash the conriction. The following judgment has "Held, that the by-law was defective and invalid because directed mainly against persons not entered upon the assessment roll, and who have not resided continuously for three months in the municipality, and is quite silent as to those persons being in the occupation of premises—'occupation' being a main ground of distinction between the transient trader and the peddler or hawker of wares, according to the scheme of the municipal act. Sir Wilfrid Laurier found an "ur answerable objection" to the proposa to take the census in 1909 in the facthat it would require an amendment said:-"Canada will do well to refrain from lightly amending the provisions of the B. N. A. Act, except in cases where there is no merely a strong, but "an overwhelming case. It was prefer an overwheiming case. It was prefer-ing the first mind, to put up even with inconvenience than tamper with the constitution, which it is the duty of Canadians to retain in its entirety, un-less a great vrong would be done by its retention."

Cartwright and McMutlen were regarded by many, while the Conservaupon as honest critics. Their failure now to protest against the carnival of extravagance that is going on and the failure of their party to carry out its most solemn pledges would almost go to stamp them as political mounts banks. And now an American consul has been offending Germany by making a statement that Bismarck, after 1878, was, continually scheming to seize Holland. Two years ago an American consul, or admiral, or an American president, for that matter, could say what he pleased in the most off-hand manner, and no effete European nation paid the slightest attention; but since Uncle Sam has gone in for Peace and Liberty, enforced by ironclad war vessels and long range rifles, the "whirt-sleeve" privilege has been removed, and Americans must be diplomatic. # BEAUTY

Not in the Features so much as in the Grace and Vitality of a Healthy Body--Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve and od Pills make Women Beautiful.

There's a certain charm of beauty in the graceful, elastic movement and clear complexion of a healthy woman in which the features do not play an important part.

The palle, sallow complexion and dull leader color of the skin, dark circles under the eyes, headaches, pains in the back and sides, dull eyes, weakness, nervousness, despondency and low spirits are symptoms of weak, watery blood and improperly nourished nerves.

No woman can be beautiful until the blood is enriched and the nerves strengthened. Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food is a food for the blood and nerves,

LITERARY NOTES.

CUTING MAGAZINE FOR MAY.

Outing for May is an exceedingly attractive number. Among its many breavy sketches angling naturally occupies a prominent position. The illustration are numerous and beautiful. The contents are: "The Dam Lespers" (trout fishing), by Wm. A. Whitney; "Up to the Hills in India," by P. E. Stevenson; "Angling for Eastern Trout," by Mary Trowbridge Townsead; "Golfing 'Round the Hub," by Ge. H. Sargent; "The Challenge of the Shamrock," by A. J. Kenealy; "Plover and Plover Shooting," by Ed. W. Sandys; "Fool's Gold," by Ed. W. Sandys; "Fool's Gold," by Ed. W. Sandys; "Fool's Gold," by Paul Pastor; "About Fly-Casting," by J. D. Ackerman: "Five Weeks Awheel in France," by Sidney Crose; "Loitering on a Canal," by R. R. Tybout; "A Cruise in the Dark after Duck," "A Cruise in the Dark after Duck," by E. W. Chubb; "M. Fishing Convert," by Oliver Kemp, and the usual editorials, poems and records.

Rudyard Kipling will have a story in the May McClure's entitled, "The Flag of Their Country," which exhibits very dramatically the difference between a popular orator and a sensitive, high-minded boy in their respective ways of "honoring the flag."

CHARM OF BITTEN BY A SHARK.

EXCITING EXPERIENCE OF A FISHER MAN IN NEW YORK WATERS.

venture Seems to Be, Do Not Catch a Shark by Its Tail; It's a Highly Bangerous Experiment.

Have you ever been bitten by a shark? Of course not, but I have, and I can assure the reader that it is an extremely interesting and entertaining experience. It happened to me at the beginning of last September, when the unbearable heat drove thousands of people from the city. A friend and I sought the cooling breezes of the seashore—Brant's point, in Jamaica bay, being our place of refuge—and we went out on the water as soon as we arrived from the city-proper.

We caught a number of porgles before sunset and laid for weakfish in the evening, but were disappointed by strikes from sunset and laid for weakfish in the evening, but were disappointed by strikes from sharks, from whose ravages the ocean trout field. Angered by the depredations of these hyenas of the sen, we determined to rig up especially for shark fishing the next day, saving our pergies for batt and "chumming." There are two methods of eatching sharks in the waters about here.

One is with rod and reed, by which specimens up to 6 feet—in length and 50 pounds in weight can be landed. The other one is by brute force with a drop line or rope.

Reports have been printed from time to time that monsters weighing 300 to 500 pounds and from 10 to 12 feet long have been taken in the waters of Great South bay, outer New York harbor, Shrewsburg river and the Kills and Newark bay. To kill such a giant fish undoubtedly requi kill such a giant fish undoubtedly requires judgment and nerve, but not much skill, for if the line is strong enough the big fish will finally exhaust itself and can then be gradually drawn into the boat.

We started the next morning in a rowboat from Brant's point for the grounds generally frequented by sharks. After coming to anchor we chummed with our porgies and soon had a number of sharks around us who gave unmistable evicoming to anchor we chummed with our porgies and soon had a number of sharks around us who gave unmistakable evidence of their presence by showing their dorsal fins and making a great commotion. We baited our hooks, cast out our lines, and in a few minutes I had a strike, and a battle royal ensued. As soon as the brute felt the sharp hook imbedded in its flesh it made a wild dash for liberty. My companion at once recled in his line to keep it from becoming entangled with my own. With lightning speed my line played off, and, though click, brake and thumb tried to slow its motion, the wheel turned around with alarming rapidity, making that peculiar plaintive noise so well known to fishermen. Ten. 20, 50, 100 yards were quickly recled off, and I began to wonder if he should ever step. He hesitated, and then the recling in began. But the minute the fish was brought closer to the boat he dashed off again in another direction.

rice nesitated, and then the receining in opgan. But the minute the fish was brought closer to the boat he dashed off again in another direction.

This play continued until the fisherman was almost exhausted, and finally the shark himself tried, through rest, to gain fresh strength for another attempt to break the line and regain his freedom. The last run of the fish was toward the boat, compelling me to wind up the line so quickly as to make my wrist and fingers ache.
He then allowed himself to be slowly pulled alongside, and he turned out to be a fine fellow about 4:9; feet in length, gracefully built, but ugly and vicious looking.
By a dexterous thrust with his hand my companion canght hold of the shark's tail and landed him in the boat with a bounce.
The prey now showed how much vitality he had left by beating the boat with his powerful tail and snatching at everything in sight with his jaws. Our sents were untenable, and we speedily placed ourselves out of his reach, my friend perching on the very bow and I hanging on to the extreme stern, leaving the fish in undiaputed control of, the space between us, every inch of which he wanted fier his mad anties. He lashed, rod, reel and fishing basket, seats and oars in his furly, but after awhile we managed to shackle his freedom somewhat by ramming an oar down his throat, which he gnawed in building fashion. The exposure to the air, to the extreme heat and the parching rays of the sun gradually weakened his efforts until his stomach could be gashed so as to make him bleed to death.

An autopsy revealed that he had swailowed four cels, a hermit crab, still alive with shell and all; hard shell clams, a number of toudfish, sea robins, bass, cunners and all sorts of sea food. How he ever expected to digest the shellish was a nystery to us.

Our sport continued, shark after shark being hooked, but some were lost. When was at last found, but the wounds could not be sewed up on account of the inflammation which had set in.

With my uninjured hand I cut the jaws out of the shark and now discovered for the first time that there were six rows of teeth, sharper than needles, each tooth having at its root two barbed prongs. I then realized what a narrow escape I had had from losing my whole hand and congratulated myself upon having got off with only a dozen wounds and scratches, more or less painful and serious. I have kept the teeth as a memento of my adventure and have also two big scars as convenirs of the day.

The lesson to be drawn from my experience is, do not catch sharks by the tail; it is dangerous. But with the dexterous use of the gaff there is little risk in this passions.
