New Temperance Act By Many Not Properly Understood

Bills at Ottawa Do Not Continue Orders-in-Council as Some Persons Think.

Enquiries made indicate that there is still some confusion in the public mind as to the effect of the prohibition legislation passed in the closing days of the Dominion session. This is doubtless due to the fact that the proposal made by the government to introduce a bill extending war-time prohibition orders-in-council for a period of 12 months after the war was not proceeded with on account of the opposition expressed at a government caucus called especially to consider the matter. It will be recalled that at the regular session of parliament last winter, a bill was passed but rejected by the senate. There is nothing in the legislation passed by parliament Monday relating to the war-time prohibition orders-in-council. When these cease to be effective on the formal proclamation of peace, conditions which existed in regard to the transportation of liquor from one province to another before the orders became effective, will be at once restored. The amendment to the Canada Temperance Act in the nature of enabling legislation providing for local option in areas enlarged to provinces. The plebiscite will be taken by the Dominion government at the request of a provincial legislature, and if a bare majority of the people vote dry, the Dominion government will issue a proclamation forbidding importation of liquor into the province.

Delays Inevitable.

The provisions of the bill, in other words, do not become effective in any province until the legislature of the province makes the necessary move to have a plebiscite taken. Until this is done, importation of liquor by private individuals, but not for sale, will be permissible after the proclamation of peace. The bill to amend the Doherty act, also adopted, provides that liquor must not be manufactured for purposes contrary to the laws of a province, which means that it cannot be manufactured for sale in a province where such sale is forbidden. It may continue to be manufactured for export, however.

rains are expected up to end of May and the opposite slopes will not get enough rain. But the greatest drought will be where mountain ranges have nothing to do with it.

I expect the total crops of 1920 to be about an average of the past ten years. Indications point to good prices and farmers who attend closely to business will, on an average, be well repaid.

There is a lot of fool talk about farmers cutting down their hours of labor. None but city chaps who are ignorant about farm life will indulge in such foolish tongue exercise. All the people who depend on agricultural industries should thoroughly organize for their own protection and pull together, but of course they cannot adopt all the rules and methods of other organizations.
