"MONS." H. De-WAY OF FRANCE

of whom it is said by the leading people of the world to be the WORLD'S GREATEST CLAIRVOYANT, is here and can be consulted daily from 9 a. m. to 8 p. m. at his parlors, 25 CANTON ST.

A tall, thin man dressed in plain black, with irregular features and strange blue eyes, was addressing the company. He was called by them "M. Home," and he was a Scotsman. He spoke French like a native. His numbers were of the most courtly description.

A small table was in the middle of the room, and on it the eyes of all the company were steadfastly fixed. Still and silent they sat for some time, and when suddenly the table, without anyone approaching it, began to move. There were mysterious rappings upon it.

M. Home was treating the Emperor, the Empress, and their friends to a spiritualistic seance.

It was from that exhibition that the Emperor at last dragged away the surprised British diplomatist. In that quietude, Napoleon the Third turned to his guest, his usually Sphinx-like face lit up now with a smile.

"SECOND SIGHT." Home, the Scotsman, claimed to be one of the most extraordinary mediums for spiritualistic manifestations that the world had ever known. From one end of the world to the other, his stories were whispered of the tall, thin, fragile man with the peculiar, wistful blue eyes.

Twenty-five years previously to that day, when he performed before the Emperor and Empress Napoleon, he had been born in the neighborhood of Edinburgh. By his father's side he was related to some of the highest families in Scotland. His mother had the reputation of being endowed with "second sight."

An aunt having adopted the strange, delirious, dreamy, and nervous, she had been provided for him. The old house of the lady occupied became full of mysterious noises and weird, unexpected apparitions that preyed on the old lady's nerves. At last she sought and found peace by sending her nephew out of the house. But the fame of the boy, in communication with "the spirits," had got abroad. Gradually, as Home gave out, the world of the clairvoyant, it spread throughout the United States, Ireland and the Continent.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.—I will not be responsible for any debts contracted by any person after this date unless upon a written order signed by me. FREDERICK W.M. CURRIE.

"Augusta," said Mr. Wyss when the quarrel was at its height, "you have devised a great variety of ways to call me a fool."

"Merely a matter of necessity," replied Mrs. Wyss. "You have devised so many ways of being one."

THE MAN WITH THE STRANGE BLUE EYES

renowned spirit medium, Mr. Home. He placed her at once in communication with her husband. They had "gone," as the old merchant had pronounced seven years before.

MESSAGE BY SPIRIT TELEGRAPHY.

The messages from the departed merchant came by means of the raps on a table in Home's room. One rap it seemed, meant "No." Three raps meant "Yes." Five raps meant a call for the alphabet.

When the alphabet was called for the letters were pointed out by the inquirer by one, and the spirit rapped on the table when the right letter came. In his way words were spelled, and the spirit sent message and answered questions.

"My own beloved Jane," spelled the spirit. "I charge your loved husband. I live to bless you, my own precious darling. I am with you always. I love, love, love you!"

The widow's heart beat with joy at that ecstatic message.

Upon several occasions after that the widow sought similar consoling communications with her dear departed.

At the third interview the spirit behaved extraordinarily.

"I love Daniel!" declared Daniel Home's son. "I love you, my own son, therefore he is your son."

According to Mrs. Lyon the table danced as if with joy.

"I am happy—happy," it rapped. "In a little time I will make myself visible to you. Oh! Do not say that the light of other days is gone. I am with you."

COMMAND OF DEAD HUSBAND.

The widow was overwhelmed with joy. She had not been on very good terms with many of her husband's relatives, she believed to be the command of her dead husband's spirit, under which Daniel Home claimed for her no less than three hundred thousand dollars.

A few months later the great trial of Mrs. Home came on in the last court. Mrs. Lyon was appealing to the courts to pronounce that the man with the strange blue eyes, and such other things, was a madwoman, but I have acted as such.

FRIEND OF KINGS.

Was her story true, or was it the fact, as Home stated, that he had exerted no undue influence at all over her—that these three hundred thousand dollars he claimed of her had been made over to him as a mark of respect for his services?

"HUSBAND BECAME PROPHETIC." Mrs. Lyon was an aged widow. Years since, she had married a rich Durham merchant who had died leaving her a fortune of over seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars. With the hand of death upon him her husband had become prophetic.

"I believe," he said, "that some years ago I shall meet you—close beside you."

Several years later Mrs. Lyon's widow remembered those words. She was not driving, or likely to die. She took a party of gentlemen was assembled. An officer looked in at the door.

"The King! The King, gentlemen!" he announced, and there entered with his star King William of Prussia. He looked around him, and noted one of the gentlemen there.

"That Mr. Home," he said, beckoning to him, and taking his hand. "You are here! What wonderful things you foretold me!"

The strange weird man who had been a friend of the fallen Emperor of the French was also a friend of the King of Prussia. His prophetic powers were believed in by each.

FLUORIN ALL-DEVOURER

A Gas That Nothing is Able to Resist.

Glass, Metals, Even the Materials in the Vessel Containing It, are Eaten Up.

The fury of the chemical world is the element fluorine; although, strangely enough, it exists peacefully in company with calcium in fluorapatite, the New York Tribune.

Although this element was known since a few other compounds, it long resisted the efforts of chemists to isolate it—this is, prepare it in a pure state, and chemically with other substances—for the instant the compound containing it was torn apart, the free fluorine attacked and combined with whatever substance composed the vessel containing it. It was finally isolated by the great French chemist Moissan.

Fluorine is a rabid gas that nothing can resist. It combines with all metals, explosively with some, or if they are already combined with some other non-metallic element, it mercilessly tears them away from it, and takes them to itself.

In uniting with sodium, potassium, calcium, magnesium and aluminum the metals become heated, even to redness, by the fervor of its embrace. Iron filings slightly warm burst into brilliant scintillations when exposed to it. Manganese does the same. Even the noble metals, which at melting heat proudly resist the fascinations of oxygen, succumb to this chemical stent at moderate temperature.

Glass is devoured at once; and water ceases to be water by contact with this gas, which, combined with its hydrogen, at the same moment forms the acid, glass-dissolving hydrofluoric acid, and liberates ozone.

Even hydrofluoric acid eats into and destroys every known substance except platinum and lead.

"What are you studying about?" asked Officer Casey.

"Oh, an amazing great question," replied the janitor philosophically as he bit his pipe.

"Maybe I can solve it."

"This try which gets out of date the quickest, a battleship or a woman's hat?"

RADICAL CHANGES IN BRITISH POLICY

Country Startled by Three Drastic Measures

May be Killed by Lords—Daylight Savings Bill and Women Franchise Revolutionary Measures

LONDON, July 7.—The three topics of the hour in England today, deal with radical changes in national affairs which half a decade ago were entirely outside the domain of political politics. Parliament is on the point of altering the daily habits of the nation six months in each year by arbitrarily advancing the hands of the clock by eighty minutes. It has also legislated through the debate stage a revolutionary measure providing for an enormous annual expenditure in free votes outside the national purse for a certain class in the community. It is ready to pass—at least the House of Commons will vote—on the next general election—a measure extending full franchise to women. It is preparing that the average Englishman begins to feel that the whole social fabric is trembling to its foundations. Moreover, these fundamental changes are being undertaken by the government in power in the same light-hearted fashion that it would propose a vote for a new battleship.

It was only a year ago that these despatches mentioned the latest fact which suggested advancing the clocks of the country so that the people should enjoy a couple of hours, more daylight recreation at the end of each day. The idea was treated with a good deal of derision, and it was seriously given a series of hearings and prepared a bill modifying the scheme to one hour, under the measure which is now ready for the final reading, which it will probably pass. No serious opposition to the bill has arisen. Yesterday's papers contain letters and editorials in protest, pointing out that however much parliament may legislate, people who now dine at 8 o'clock will next year dine at 9 o'clock, which will be the same time under the new law. The Stock Exchange will be seriously discommodated because it transacted the enormous business done here in American securities it will be necessary to keep the exchange open limited at 10 o'clock in order to overlap the New York session by an hour as at present. Mr. Willets, the chief of the London Stock Exchange, offers to bet that the American Government will adopt it within a couple of years and that this objection will then be removed.

This revolutionary measure—the Old Age Pension Bill—which in its present shape, adds $40,000,000 annually to the already overburdened budget. It was being rushed through the debate stage in three sittings by means of closure. It pensions all poor above 70 years of age on a fixed scale of payments. This is a modification of the original measure, but does not change its essential character. It still remains true that certain pensioners will eventually be richer than their neighbors by the amount of the being granted, and this falling into the more heavily subsidized classes, which the government has insisted on maintaining on a non-contributory basis, thus defying the experience of many human generations which have proved that the more generous the character, while it tends to sustain it. Neither the government nor anybody else has suggested where the money is to come from to meet this new drain. The bill becomes operative for only three months of the present fiscal year, and the Chancellor Lloyd-George, speaking at the Mansion House on Friday night, the measure is already falling rapidly.

Such a bill, if it were not or otherwise, which has no power to deal with appropriations. This measure, however, is introduced separately from the budget, and it contains features on which the Upper House has already expressed its doubts as to its wisdom. There is no danger that it will pass in its present shape, but the method of its introduction is a political device made in committee were Unionist proposals. The best anti-socialist issue is that the House of Lords should reject the measure in toto, and a notary amend it out of existence.

A clear issue would then be created as well as a direct challenge to the government to appeal to the country in behalf of their pet measure for promoting the general cause of Socialism. There would not be the slightest doubt of the result. Premier Asquith's nondescript combination would be overwhelmed.

This week's Suffragette martyrdom has not, on the whole, moved the heart of the English people to any great degree of pity. It was certainly a great demonstration from a spectacular point of view, but interest in the matter has already disappeared except perhaps in the perturbed mind of the Government leaders, who are at their wits' end as to how to deal with their hybrid female persecutors.

This time they are trying the experiment of using somewhat greater severity towards those who are drawn in the police net. The public sense of justice apparently has not been outraged by this policy. It is safe to say, however, that it will not prove effective as a deterrent.

The tactics of the militant Suffragettes have at last aroused organized opposition, and it was high time, if they intend to avert the triumph of the agitators. The National Women's Anti-Suffrage Association is rapidly gaining adherents, and it will endeavor to prove that a majority of their sex in this country is very far from demanding the suffrage. They have a big task before them to offset the tremendous energy of the sisterhood on the other side, but numbers decide in an issue of this nature and the general opinion of the country at large as well as Parliament will await evidence.
