I SHALL KNOW

When I pass that fearful river
That's no broader than a breath,
That's hung round with gloomy cloud-
riffs
And is known to us as death,
And I enter the existence
That shall there before me glow,
Mysteries shall lose insistence—
I shall know.

When I enter in that country
Just beyond the swelling tide
That for which my soul was longing
While I did on earth abide Subjects that did sore perplex me
Often on the earth below
These shall cease at once to vex me—
I shall know.

When I waken in His likeness
And my soul is satisfied
In the joy of my Redeemer
Who for me was crucified,
Nothing then shall fret my spirit
Changed by resurrection's glow
In him all things I inherit—
I shall know.
