W. E. HENLEY,

Dead Actors.

Where are the passions they essayed.
And where the tesrs they made to flow?
Where the wild humors they portrayed
For laughing worlds to see and know?
Othello's wrath and Juliet's wee?
Sir Peter's whims and Timon's gall?
And Millamont and Romeo?
Into the night go one and all.

Where are the braveries fresh or frayed?
The plumes, the armor—friend or foe?
The clot ho gold, the rare brocade
The mantles glistening to and fro?
The pump, the pride, the royal show;
The cries of war and festival?
The youth, the grace; the charm, the glow
Into the night go one and all.

The curtain falls, the play is played;
The beggar packs beside the beau;
The monarch troops, and troops the maid;
The thunder huddles with the snow,
Where are the revelers, high and low
The clashing aword? The lover's call?
The dancers, glesming row on row?
Into the night go one and all.

ENVOY. Prince, in one common overthrow
The hero tumbles with the thrall;
As dust that drives, as straws that blow,
Into the night go on one and all.

SHORT INSTRUCTIONS FOR LOW MASSES. [Delivered by the Rev. James Dono

hoe, rector of the church of St. Thomas Aquinas, Brooklyn, N. Y.]

XL. HOLY ORDERS.

DEAR PECPLE: I am going to speal to you to-day on the Christian Priest hood. I am fully persuaded that consequences of the highest kind depend upor the people having a just appreciation or what that priesthood is. The day when there will be no priest, humanity will be a synchym with crime; the world will be a prin. The day when you come to a ruin. The day when you come to judge the priest from a narrow, worldly standpoint, you destroy the salutary action of his ministry upon your life. I you lived in the time of Christ, talked with Him, saw Him perform miracles and listened to His discourses, and stil judged Him to be a mere man, His blood would be shed in vain for you. I you judge the sacerdotal power and dignity by merely human standards, you do an injustice to Christ by failing to recognize the boundless love that moved Him to institute the Priesthood. You do an irreparable injury to yourself by failing to partly appreciate the means o satisfaction and salvation He has given you. A fatal mistake may also be made by confounding the sacerdotal dignit-with the personal merit of the depositor of that dignity. In Christ alone the dignity and the merit are absolutely identical. In His representatives these two things are separable. Thanks be to God, they are generally in harmony, bu if ever they are not it is spiritual self destruction to despise the dignity or account of the person. Considered in itself, the secondard dignity can neither be augmented by the excellence of Him who is clothed with it, nor diminished by the unworthiness of him who exercises it. A true conception of the sublimity of the Christian Priesthood, a the same time that it is very advantage.

the same time that it is very advan tageous to the people, is for the pries himself most salutary. It is in the rature of things that a man will try to be what it is well known he cught to be. But how can I raise your minds to just appreciation of the sublime dignit; and wondrous powers of the priest All the potentates on earth, all the power, learning and skill that have ever appeared in this world, could not make priest. His vocation, his state, his dignity, his functions, his charge are in dissolutely united to his person. The power which could make a man the ruler of all the nations of the world could not make him a priest, and there is no power on earth that could take away his priesthood.

"To be a priest," says St. Thomas Aquinas, "is to be a mediator between God and man."

The Council of Trent says : "If an one shall say that there is not in the New Testament a visible and externs priesthood, or that there is no power of consecrating and offering up the bod and blood of Christ, and of forgiving an retraining sins, but an effice only and bare ministry of preaching the Gospe let him be anathema." There is then priesthood, and the priest is the media tor between God and man. If he is mediator he is placed between two par mediator he is placed between two parties who are apart for the purpose of bringing about a reconciliation. The priest is the mediator between God and the people. He transmits to the people God's gifts and presents to God the needs of the people; offers for them the Most High, prayers, thanks ansacrifice; as St. Paul says in his epistle to the Hebrews: "Every Pontie taken from among men was established for men, regarding the worship of God, to offer gitts and sacrifices for sin." To be a priest is to be a mediator between heaven and earth mediator between heaven and earth mission of ending the separation between God and men, of establishing the relation of love which should unite the creature to the Creator. Man in separ ating from God commits a crime. crime must be expiated before a union is re-established. Hence the necessity of sacrifice. Hence in all ages the of sacrince. Hence in all ages the essential function of the priest has been the offering of sacrifice. His very name Sacerdos, means offering the sacrifice Jesus Christ is the only one who offered sacrifice sufficient to expiate man's sin St. Paul puts this very clearly when he says: "There is but one God, there is but one mediator between God and man Lesus Christ, who delivered Himself for that He might always appear before the face of God in our behalf, that He migh remain perpetually our mediator.

Now, if Jesus Christ is the only medi Now, if Jesus Christ is the only mediator, He is also the only Priest. The sacerdotal power and dignity belong to Him alone. The priesthood is in some way enclosed in Him. It has in Him it origin, its fullness, its root, and its expansion. But there is a visible priesthood in the world, and it is Jesus Christ, who delivered Himself for the redemption of all." In a hundred places of sacred Scripture the doctrin of our mediator is clearly put forward Christ is called the Lamb of God wh takes away the sins of the world. B the obedience of one we are all mad-just. Jesus Christ entered into heaves that He might always appear before the Fair is My Native Isle. Air-"Erin the Tear and the Smile in Thin Eyes."

Fair is my native isle,
Prond is she, too;
Sweet is her kindly smile,
Loving and true,
Exited once sigh for her,
Brave men would die for her,
Such love have I jor her Bo would I do.

Dark has her story been Down through long years;
Oft her sweet face was seen
Wet with sad tears;
Now all looks bright for her,
Now comes delight for her,
Freedom and right for her,
Placed midst her peers.

Far in the olden time High was her fame; High was her fame;
Nations in every clime
Blessed her dear name,
Peace comes once more to her,
Fame as of yore to her,
Each breeze wafts over to her,
Praise and acclaim.

-T. D. Sullivan in Dublin Nation THE PRIEST AND THE PUBLIC.

AN INTERESTING COMPARISON BY REV M'SWEENY IN THE "CATHOLIC

I went with a priest once to call on the former Archbishop of an American See. As we approached his house, I saw a group of poor men and women, evidently of the needy class, standing about on the sidewalk, and apparently awaiting their turn to enter the hall door, which stood wide open. "There they are!" said my guide. "Every Mondoor, which stood wide open. "There they are!" said my guide. "Every Monday morning he gives audience to any poor people that want it, and the door is left open and ro porter in sight, so that they won't be timid about entering." We went in, and for my part, to use the strong simile of a French writer, "I telt as if were about to call on Jesus Christ." What the priest thought and felt I will What the priest thought and felt I will say later on, but I never before realized the character of the successor of the the character of the successor of the apostles so much as on that occasion. He is the same Prelate who was found mending his cassock while stopping in Baltimore in attendance on the Plenary Council, just as the apostle of Alaska, Archbishop Seghers, lately deceased, had to do and did, as we read in his letters, far up on the banks of the Youkon. I might recall other instances in the lives of laymen and clergymen which have left an indelible and a most edify ing impression on myself, precisely on count of their plain, unaffected ways What an appalling thought it is, indeed, the—that our every slightest act may be noted and treasured up, and produce an everlasting effect on those who observe it! My object, however, is to inquir whether and how far the democratic simplicity of Sts. Peter and Paul, of Archbishop N — and Father D — and Pishop Baley are expedient for the propagation of the taith of Christ amongst the general public, and its pre-servation in the children of the fold. I and Peter Cooper, as well as Socrates and Plato, out of the question. It shocks one to have a person that hears of their wisdom, patriotism and philan thropy ask how much their income was or how they dressed, as if suspending his verdict on their characters till he weighed their wealth. So much for philsophers of whom, indeed, it may be said that, unless their sungularity gives us reason to suspect their sanity, their titles, abodes and apparel make no difference in their acceptability as leave Dr. Brownson and Horace Greeley

teachers of wisdom.

But teachers of the faith: Does it mske a difference whether they are entitled eminence, grace, lordship, right reverend, and such? whether they ride in a carriage or in a street car, or go afoot carrying their own carpet bags? whether they wear a dress hat or a Kossuth, a cossock or a pair of trousers? It appears that it does to a greater or less extent, and among peoples of different character and condition.

For instance, I am assured, and ex-perience has taught me, that in Ireland priest is no prophet unless he wears which so many contemptuous epithets are applied, but which I believe is now technically known as a silk hat. I know many an excellent priest in this country whose mission would be barren in the Isle of Saints because he prefers the easy, graceful, sensible slouch of the Western plains. What does this show on the part of the Hibernians? We shall illustrious theologian, Archbishop Kenrick, of Baltimore, used to say—"lord me no lords; you left your lords in Ire-

A graduate of the college already mentioned complained in my hearing that Ca dinal McCloskey came to a certain church in his metropolitan city to give Confirmation, and actually came in a street car! "O tempora! O mores!" I was expected to express a respectful amount of virtuous surprise at the forgetfulness of his dignity on the part of the first American Cardinal. 1 didn't. But I only a surprise at the coole was t want to show how the people, even the educated, even in the chief city of the republic, look at these things.

There was a layman's opinion. I told about my call on Archbishop N———. Would you believe me when I say that the priest who accompanied me actually found fault with the Bishop for receiving those poor wretches? I could not help remembering how "He receiveth publicans I sinners," and I was astonished at the "Couldn't he let one of the young priests give the pledge to those fellows, and also listen to the stories of those poor women, who only want a dollar?" So, what ed fied me beyond anything I had experienced, even in my five years' residence in Rome, actually the ecclesiastic to find fault with one of the pioneer Bishops of our country.

like the same Prelate either, because he to this in the course of time, for history accepted a splendid carriage and horses only to send them at once to be sold for and gridirons, along the canals and rail.

because he is their chief social and political representative, and they feel that they will be respected according as he is, and they know the deference paid to dress and appearance generally, but also they feel that the mass of themselves are so poor and suffer so much from the ignorance which results from poverty, that they will fail to recognize the priest as their superior unless he assumes a head gear similar to that of the easy and better informed classes. So much, too, is the imagination bound up with the reasoning faculty, that the height of the hat by which he excels his brethren helps them to remember the superior station he fills and to reverence him accordingly. Thus you see there is deep philosophy and profound knowledge of human nature even in the choice of a covering for the head. If we were all perfect, and sin had not brought shame on us, doubtless we would get on because he is their chief social and politiwere all perfect, and sin had not brought shame on us, doubtless we would get on very well in the majestic nakedness of Adam, who was clothed only with the royal mantle of "original justice," and in the "beauty unadorned" of the mother and queen of humanity. But I fear me that there would be sad disorders if we attempted as ander reversion to that attempted a sudden reversion to that beautiful fashion of the body. We are a fallen race, and are not strong enough to do without the otherwise absurd, ugly and distoring encumbrance of clothing.

Now as to the dwelling of the pries'. There is no doubt that the Irish like to have their priests live in a "decent" house, and for the same reasons which make them insist on the tall hat. In deed, I was respectfully but firmly inter-pellated once, because I did not buy a dwelling for myself that far outshone in appearance and actually exceeded in value the adjoining church edifice, in which the pioneers of a certain parish modestly affered worsh p to the Hidden God. And this while I was punching and soraping to form the nucleus of a fund for the election of a new and larger church, which the common voice demanded. Yet verily those same Irish have a remarkable predilection for the ministrations of priests who "profess poverty." The whole business looks very much as if they would force secular clergy, cardinals, bishops, prelates and all, to represent them and protect them before the world and in temporal matters, but when it comes to settling their private affairs with God, ah! then, send for Friar Thomas." In Ireland and in Canada they call the bishop's house a palace, and truly it is amusing sometimes to see the unpre-tending building to which this appellative is applied, and it is sad, too, at least to some, to notice the appalling wretchedness of the dwellings of those whose con tributions went to erect the sometimes magnificent mansion that bears the regal title. Is there philosophy in this, too?

There is. It is found here also in the weakness of human nature.
Alzeg, the German ecclesiastical historian, tells us how St. Boniface, the Apos tle of Germany, "exerted himself to have the bishops created spiritual peers or the empire, in order that they should enjoy a certain political consideration and pre-rogative which all would recognize and respect, and possess some sort of protection against the violence of kings and the insolence of nobles." He says, moreover, that "the possession of allodial estates on the part of bishops and abbots, although frequently entered into from sordid motives, was necessary in that rude peo-ple, because the clergy had to establish themselves permanently in the country, and this could only be effected by en-tering into close alliance and maintaining intimate relations with the great and powerful, who commanded the respect and the obedience of the lower orders. Now in order that the bishops and the abbots might be regarded with familiar feelings, it was necessary that they should become in some sort the equals of the nobility, and, like them, be qualified to take their places in the diet of the em pire, and the only available way of rising to such a distinction and consideration among a coarse and semi-civilized people was to follow the example of the lay that strange capital integument which is lords, and acquire large landed posses-the object of so much bantering and to sions, held either in freehold or in fief. But "peers of the the empire" had to dwell in castles and "palaces;" this is how the bishop's house came to be so called. There are some of those prince bishops still among the nations of Cen tral and Eastern Europe, and the prin ciple on which their existence is based one of those whereon is founded also the temporal sovereignity of the Pops.

Was St. Boniface wise in this course?
There seems to be no doubt at all about it, even though the people were not coarse and semi civilized, for even the most highly cultured pations have always felt that the chief representatives of the spiritual power should have a position, a maintenance, and a State equal to that of the lords temporal. But what about a state of society in which lords temporal do not exist? Of course as Alzog says, there was "danger of avarice," and God knows what frightful abuses fol-lowed this policy, but yet, as human nature is, it was the only enduring way to keep up the necessary influence of religion. For Republicanism, in all its majestic and beautiful simplicity, is main-tained in this fallen world only with difficulty; pride, luxury and lust, on the part of the stronger members of society, trampling on poverty, gentleness and chastity, has too often been the normal condition, and the week must have their protectors, the bishops and priests, recogn zed in public life in a secure position. Have thing come to this pass in the United States, that our priests must have their noble dwellings and "palaces," must attire themselves like the rich and wear titles of nobility? Is the republic fallen so low that its citizens cannot fallen so low that its citizens cannot recognize the truth unless its herald is called "Your Eminence," "My Lord" or "Your Grace," and lives in a palatial I heard from other parties that the mansion and preaches in an expensive wealthy Catholics of his diocese didn't edifice? We may, we shall, also! come repeats itself : but are we there already It is a hard question to answer.

There were those who thought and said that Cardinal McCloskey's red the orphans. And these critics were men and women who were wielding pickaxes and hammers, and bending over washtubs stockings would, like the "single hair" of Judith's neck, draw the plutocrats of New York and their wives (the latter good reason why we should be represented was already deep in the wisdom of Aquinas and Dominto, and was reading in the footsteps of Bertraud and Las Casas.

Why do the Irish want their priests to wear a high hat? I suppose it is not only Mirst) irresistibly to the conviction of and in the councils of the Pope, and what suffered all the tortu for ten years. Four emember two of the most wealthy privileges Catholics of other nations of the same do we also desire continuous and the blahops and the inferior failed to retirely cured her, may be a suffered all the tortu for ten years. Four emembers two of New York turning their to enjoy. The question is: Shall these woman again, after failed to relieve her.

cathedral and going off to be married in one of the neighboring Protestant con-venticles by man in a black broadcloth coat. And this just about the time of

St. Boniface legislated, surely to the far worse attenuated refinement and semi satanic polish of the people of Imperial Rome. Men, like the decaying swamp wood, often glisten more briliantly as their combustion and decay advances. But, thanks be to God! we will strive to maintain respect for the office and person of our Chief Magistrate, although addressing him merely as "Mr. President," and up hold the law even with the gallows, all the time that we entitle simply "Governor" that fellow-citizen who holds his individual hand the awful power of life and death. This is still a missionary country. We Catholics are scarce more than one in eight, and our losess, in all probability, still outbalance our natural increase and gain by conversions. Now what is the most effective manner for the mission ary? Look at them when they come to give a mission even to the faithful. They discard all titles, come in all simplicity of speech and manner, do not even don the surplice, and erect a simple, Democratic platform down almost to the level of the people, instead of speaking from the formal, aristocratic pulpit.

A canon of the diocese of Osma, in Spain (they are wealthy and dress grandly, those canons), once accompanied his bishop into France. On their way they passed through the country of the Albigensian heretics, and met certain Cistercian monks, whom Innocent III, had despatched to convert these sectaries. Observing their pomp and magnificence, which contrasted strangely with the abstemious life and poverty of the heretical leaders, the bishop, invited to the council at Montpelier, suggested that is those monks would successfully accomplish their mission they must put a triumphant Church, and set about con verting the heretics in the simplicity and poverty of the Apostles. The holy bishop himself took part in the work, and, putting off his purple robes and gaiters, went about barefoot preaching the word of God. The canon accom-panied him, and after the bishop's death continued the work, and founded that order which, with the one instituted at the same time by Francis of Assisi, saved the tottering Lateran Basilica from ruin. The canon was known ever after as plain Brother Dominic, but the Church after his hrppy death placed the letter S. before his venerable name.

Is there no lesson here for us ? Are we prudent in putting on already the blazonry of a triumphant Church? The saints have again and again been sent by God to recall the clergy to simplicity. They never objected to the divine nor to the ecclesiastical hierarchy; on the contrary, they did all in their power to austain it and yielded it entire and perfect obedience. What they opposed and attacked with all their might, and the force of their own exemple, was the orce of their own example, was the human adornment, the trappings and the show, the unnecessary possessions, all those things, in fact, which impede the priest in his struggle against the devil, the world, and the flesh. "On! yes; that's all very well in theory, but practically"—Far be it from me to conyes; that's all very weil in theory, but practically"—Far be it from me to condemn what seems to be the practice of the rulers of the Church. But this I know, that when those princes and lords and their American counterparts want and ally call in one of the disciples of Dominic, or Francis, or Ignatius, consione; when they themselves want to settle their accounts with God, they go to the same shop; and even His Holiness, and their Emmences, and the Prelates generally, when on their death beds, deal with one of the same firm.

Well we're off again. Isn't there some way of explaining these apparent and malies and reconciling these inconsisten cies? One was suggested to me recently which may serve to unite things seemingly so widely disjoined.

It is this: The Church is Catholic—that is, universal. Hence all men must find satisfaction for their minds and peace for their hearts in her communion. On the other hand, social classification is inevitable. Therefore the Church must have representatives competent to introduce themselves and be made welcome ir every rank whatsoever of society, and to fit in and even to grace and bless every social festivity. She has her Cardinals for the halls of princes and rulers generfor the halls of princes and rancy, politi-ally; her "Prelates" for diplomacy, politi-and for family cal arrangements, and for family gatherings of the rich; her Jesuits public worship; her Dominicans for preaching; her Passionists for the death-bed of the heavily burdened consciences of the powerful and wealthy; her Franciscans for the wealthy; her Franciscans for the gentle, the simple, and the poor of Christ; her bishops and the parish clergy for everything in general. So does she make herself all things to all men, that she may gain all for Christ: she has raised up saints n every one of those ecclesiastical grades and families. Herein, very probably, lies the true explanation of the great variety in the hierarchy and the regular bodies.

As to the question proposed in the beginning of this paper, I wish to remark that it is not : Shall we have Cardinals and other ecclesiastical officials, in addi-tion to the divinely established hierarchy clergy assume externals here that are cathedral and going off to be married in one of the neighboring Protestant conventicles by man in a black broadcloth coat. And this just about the time of those historic events, the creation of the first American Cardinal and the opening of his new cathedral.

Do we need monsignors—that is merely titular dignitaries—to soon in the American Church? I presume some will say we do. But there are those who think that the American people will still listen more willingly to the one that is addressed himself and addresses them like St. Paul, as "Men, brethren" (Acts it. 29). "Talk to us like a man, brother!" seems to ex ever varying circumstances of times and

MORE SOMETHING ELSE THAN CHRISTIAN.

"Knoxonian," in Canada Presbyterian "Knoxonian," in Canada Presbyterian.

Here is a man who hates Popery much more than he hates sir. He hates a Roman Catholic far more than he hates the devil. Holy water is far more distasteful to him than bad whiskey. His highest and most spiritual aspiration is expressed by the phrase, "To hell with the Pope." He sings "Croppies, Lie Down" with greater gusto than he would sing "Jesus. Lover of My Soul" or sing "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," or "Nearer, My God, to Thee." In fact he never does sing these hymns at all They don't remind him of the good, old when Catholic and Protestant days neighbours butchered each other. The greatest sacrifice this man ever made for Protestentism was to curse Popery; his highest work for this fallen world cite his neighbours to vote against Mowat, and burn the Ross Selections This man is more Protestant than Caristian. Pity that Protestantism should tian. Pity that Protestantism should have to carry such men.

Here is a pompous looking man who puts on insufferable airs. He is not anybody in particular, but he always poses as if he were a distinguished person. He talks in very sff-eted tones about "the Cnurch." He turns up his nose at what he calls "the sects." He sniffs the air and says he won't "mix" with these sects. He speaks patronizingly of Spurgeon, John Hall and other men of distinction. Poor Spurgeon. He always hates Methodists and Methodism with a peculiarly bitter hatred. Tais with a peculiarly bitter hatred. This man is more Episcopalian than Christian. Look at this brawny, pugilistic fellow who is always anxious to do battle for his Church. If a Scotchman, he is ready for argument. He can quote from the good Book with considerable readiness and skill, and he has at his finger ends the stock arguments sgainst Methodism. Drunk or sober he can argue. If an Irishman, he is ready to "lick" at moment's notice any man in the town ship who dares to say one word against the Confession of Faith, the Catechism, or against any person or thing distinc-tively Presbyterian. This man is more yterian than Christian. sneaking sort of a way, with a smirk on his countenace, and pious phrases on his lips? He is very civil in a quiet time. When there is no "boom" on he is soft and sweet. But let a special effort get well under way, and begin to draw, or a camp meeting raise a commotion in the neighborhood, and that sweet little brother in one hour turns bitter and His brotherly love he used to speak about at Union meetings vanishes into thin air, and he denounces all the other denominations, especially the Presbyterians. He says Calvinism sends thousands of men to the bad place. That little brother is more Methodist than Christian See this grim, ill natured looking man who goes around the other demonina who goes around the other demonia-tions and coaxes the people to leave. If he hears that snybody in some other Church has a difficulty of any kind, he immediately goes to him, and gives him angry man goes into shops and offices, and rings the changes on "into and out of." He sneaks into changes kitchens and back-yards, and tells the servant girl something about bap-tidzo and the lexicons. If foreman in a shop, or any position that gives him power, the power is certain to be used in favor of the tank. It is not necessary to say that this man is more Baptist than Christian. Rowland Hill said that he would not cross the street to make a man a Baptist, though he would travel a long distance to make him a Christian, This grim proselytizer would not cross the street to make a man a Christian but he would travel around the globe but he would travel around the globe to make him a Baptist. Watch this man with the furtive glance, the slouched bat, and the limp Bible. He begins his meetings by solemnly declaring a great many times that he has no object in view but to save souls. Were he an honest man, and had no other object in view, he would not make the statement so often. A man who knows he is telling the truth man who knows he is telling the truth generally says a thing but once. After getting the ear of the people this man with the furtive glance begins to make attacks on the Churches and ministers in the neighborhood. The next step is moral cases; her Benedictines for bublic worship; her Dominicans for bad no such intention. Then follows a had no such intention. Then follows a system of proselytizing that would make the cheek of the toughest ward politician crimson with shame. Whatever mis-representations, trickery and deceit of the vilest kind can do to break down the Churches is done-and done under a thin veneering of hypocrisy. Lying i never so odious as when done in the name of the Lord, Misrepresentation is never so vile as when uttered with a pious snival. Hypocrisy is never so loathsome as when the hypocrite lays one hand on the horns of the altar, and tries to stab his neighbor with the other This man with the furtive glance is more Plymouth than Christian. In fact he is all Plymouth.

A Terrible Ten Years. Mrs. Thomas Acres, of Huntley, Ont., suffered all the tortures of liver complaint for ten years. Four bottles of B. B. B. for ten years. Four bottles of B. B. entirely cured her, making her like a n woman again, after other medicines had

A PERUVIAN MARTYR.

DEVOTED PRIEST WHO DIED RATHER THAN BETRAY THE SECRETS OF THE CONFESSIONAL. About a year ago, measures were taken at Rome tending toward the canoniza-tion of Fray Martin de Andres Rerez, a tion of Fray Martin de Andres Rerez, a Spanish friar of the order of St. Camilo, better known as that of the Beuna Muerte, or Good Death. At the same time a like honor was proposed for a Peruvian priest, Pedro Maruliz, who was a member of the same confraternity. Of the latter but little was known, except the mere fact of his martyrdom on account of his refusal to disclose the secrets of the confessional. However, the discovery at Rome, of an old oil painting representing a priest dressed in the habit of the order of the Buena Muerte, lying on a cottin, and four in the habit of the order of the Buena Muerte, lying on a coffin, and four musketeers drawn up before it in the position of firing, has caused a more strenuous search for authentic data in regard to the death of Fray Pedro, Don Ricardo Palms, director of the National Library at Lima, has searched the archives of that institution, and from his investications is gleaned the following investigations is gleaned the following history of the Peruvian martyr: Fray Pedro Maruliz was born of noble parents at Farma, in the year 1780, and was admitted to holy orders in 1807. Peru, at that time, was torn asunder by political dissensions and everything was tending towards a separation from Spain. It was the fashion to be a patriot, but Father Maruliz was too conservative to join the ranks. In his opinion, the patriots were promoters of heresy, and, for that reason, under the ban of excom-munication. The good father was, it possible, a greater royalist than the King nimself. When Viceroy La Serna aban-doned Lima, in 1821, leaving General San Martin, the patriot leader, at liberty to enter the city, Fray Pedro refused to submit to the new order of things and cast his lot with the armies of Spain. La Serna appointed him chaplain of one of his divisions, and he took part in all the separate combats of the campaign. When the Spanish General, Don Ramon Rodil, seized the Castle of Callao, Father Maruliz accompanied him. The battle of Ayancho broke the military power of Spain in Peru, but Rodil and Maruliz, beseiged in the Castle Callao, held out for nine months, till September, against bombardment, scurvy and hun-

At last the soldiers began to revolt, and on the 23rd of September, on the eve of the festival of our Lady of Mercy, it was announced to the brigadier that at 9 o'clock a formidable revolt led by Cap tain Montero de las Rosas, the ablest o his officers, and others in whom Rodil had placed the greatest confidence, was to be made. Without a moment's hesi tation he ordered all of the conspirators Who is this smooth-tongued, oily-looking little man who moves about in a submitted them to the greatest tortures, revolutionary plot. To relieve himself from of any further worry, the brigadier determined to shoot all the prisoners, whether guilty or innocent, at precisely the same hour fixed by them for their uprising.

"Chaplain," he said to Father Maruliz, "it is now 6 o'clock, and in three hour your reverence will have confessed these rebels," and left the dungeon. At 9 the thirteen prisoners were in the presence of God.

But in spite of this wholesale sacrifice, the mind of the general was still dis-turbed. "Who knows," he soliloquized, "if there be not others here yet alive harboring the same plans as those dis patched? No, this thing shall be sifted to the bottom. The confessor must know all the details, and all who are concerned," and calling his orderly he bade him summon the chaplain. When Father Maruliz entered, the me all, omitting no name or particular."

"But, general, you ask an impossibility. I would not sacrifice the salvation of my soul by revealing the secrets of a penitent, if the King, whom God may have in holy keeping, should demand it of me."

The general was furious in his rage, and seizing the priest by the shoulders he shouted: "Friar! either you shall tell me or you

Fray Pedro, unmoved, replied with calmness:

"If Almighty God has ordained my martyrdom, let His holy will be done.
The minister of the altar can tell nothing"
"Speak, friar, traitor to your King, or banner and your general!"

"I am as loyal as you to the flag of Castile, but never can I be a traitor to my God."

Rodil rushed to the door, and calling Captain Yoturralde, ordered him to bring a file of soldiers with their pieces charged.

The soldiers silently entered. In the room where the tragedy was enacted were several empty boxes, one of which was about six feet in length.
"On your knees, friar!" ordered Rodil. Father Maruliz knowing that the hor as destined to be his coffin, fell on his knees beside it,

"Make ready, aim!" ordered the Spanish general, and, turning to the kneeling priest, he said: "For the last time, and n the name of the King, I command you

"In the name of God, I refuse," replied the friar in resolute tones. "Fire !"

o confess."

And Father Pedro Maruliz fell a martyr to sacred duty, his breast pierced by the fatal bullets.

cott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites is very palpatable and much better than the plain oit. Dr. W. H. Cameron, of Halifax, N. S., says: "I have prescribed Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites for the past two years and found it more agreeable to the stomach, and have better results from its use than any other preparation of the kind I have ever tried." Put up in 50c. and $1 size.

Want of Sleep

Is sending thousands annually to the insane asylum; and the doctors say this trouble is alarmingly on the increase. The usual remedies, while they may give temporary relief, are likely to do more harm than good. What is needed is an Alterative and Blood-purifier.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla is incomparably the best. It corrects those disturbances in the circulation which cause sleeplessness, gives increased vitality, and restores the nervous system to a healthful

Rev. T. G. A. Coté, agent of the Mass Home Missionary Society, writes that his stomach was out of order, his sleep very often disturbed, and some impurity of the blood manifest; but that a perfect cure was obtained by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Frederick W. Pratt. 424 Washington street, Boston, writes: "My daughter was prostrated with nervous debility. Ayer's Sarsaparilla restored her to health."

William F. Bowker, Erie, Pa., was cured of nervousness and sleeplessness by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla for about two months, during which time I weight increased over twenty pounds.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla, PREPARED BY

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six betues, $5.

TO THE CLERGY.

The Clergy of Western Ontario will, we feel assured, be glad to learn that Wilson Bros., General Grecers, of London, have now in stock a large quantity of Sicilian Wine, whose purity and genuineness for Sacramental use is attested by a certificate signed by the Rector and Prefect of Studies of the Diocesan seminary of Marsaja. We have ourselves seen the original of the certificate, and can testify to its authenticity. The Clergy of Western Ontario are cordisly invited to send for samples of this truly superior wine for altar use.

CHURCH PEWS and SCHOOL FURNITURE

The Bennett Furnishing Co., of London, Ont., make a specialty of manufacturing the latest designs in Church and School Furniture. The Catholic Clergy of Canada are respectfully invited to send for catalogue and prices before awarding contracts. We have lately put in a compleie set of Pews in the Brantford Catholic Church, and for many years past have been favored with contracts from a number of the Clergy in other parts of Ontario, in all cases the most entire satisfaction having been expressed in regard to quality of work, lowness of price, and quickness of execution. Such has been the increase of business in this special line that we found it necessary some time since to establish a branch office in Glasgow, Scotland, and we are now engaged manufacturing Pews for new Churches in that country and brained Address.

BENNET FURNISHING COMY

LONDON, ONT., CANADA.

References: Rev. Father Bayard, Sarnia, Lennon, Brantford; Molphy, lugersoil; Corcoran, Parthill, Twohy, Kingston; and Rev. Bro. Annold. Moutweal

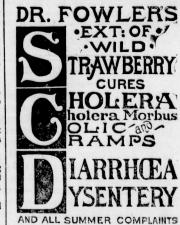

SOLD Live at home and make more money working or u an at anything else in the world. Either sex. Costly of Terms Free, Address, TRUE & CO. Augusta, Maine

When I say CURE I do not mean merely to stop them for a time, and then have them re-turn again. I MEAN A RADICAL CURE I have made the disease of

FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS.

Alife long study. I WARRANT my remedy to CURE the worst cases. Because Chiers have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and A FREE BOTTLE of my INFALLIBLE REMEDY. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and it will cure you. Address Dr. H. G. ROOT. 37 Yonge St., Toronte, Ont.

AND FLUXES OF THE BOWELS IT IS SAFE AND RELIABLE FOR CHILDREN OR ADULTS.

" MISTAKES & MODERN INFIDELS."

New Rook on Christian Evidences and Complete Answer to Col. ingersoll's "Mistakes of Moses" Highly recommended by Cardinal Taschercau of Quebec, Archbishop Ryan, Philadelphia, and 14 other Catholic Archbishops and Bishops, five Protestant Bishops, many other prominent clergy, and the press, Cloth $1.25. Paper 75 cents. AGENTS WANTED. Address BEV. GEC. R. NORTHIGHAVES, Ingersoll, Ontario, Canada.