Were shown during the first three and a half months of the current year, by members of our Lantern Slide Exchange. The epidemic and fuel shortage prevented a larger use. It must be well worth while, or else the 224 members would not have gone to the trouble and expense.

IN ANSWERING ADVERTISEMENTS, PLEASE MENTION "THE CANADIAN CHURCHMAN."

"You know that means that you must be here every evening in the week, from half-past seven to ten o'clock. You'll want to be away sometimes, Theodore."

"Yes, I s'pose I will, but I'm ready to stay here all the same until night school begins again."

"Very well; then we'll let it be so, and we'll try to have the room ready for our opening in a week or two—as soon as we have enough books and papers to begin with." Mr. Scott locked the door as he spoke, and the two went downstairs.

Theodore's face was full of satisfaction over the promised reading-room, but it clouded a little as his teacher said:—

"You mustn't be disappointed, Theodore, if very few boys spend their evenings in this room for a while. Most of the boys in this neighbourhood are so used to loafing about the streets that they like that best, especially in hot weather, and, of course, few of them care much for reading. They will have to be educated up to it."

"S'pose that's so," replied the boy, thoughtfully, "but they'll like it next winter when it's cold an' stormy outside," he added.

"Yes," assented the gentleman, adding, as he turned to depart, "Theo, Mrs. Rawson will be home tomorrow. Don't you want to come and take supper with us, and hear what she has to say about Nan, and the little one?"

"Oh, yes, thank you, sir," cried Theodore, with a happy smile.

"All right, then; we shall expect you," and with a pleasant "Good-night," Mr. Scott went away.

Theodore rather dreaded the supper with Mrs. Rawson, but he forgot to be shy or ill at ease when she began to tell him about the delightful old farmhouse, and the happy times that Nan and the baby were having there. She told him everything she could think of that would be of interest to him, and he listened to it all with an eager face and a glad heart. If Little Brother must be far away from him, Theodore was happy in the assurance that the child was in such a beautiful place, and that already he had begun to grow stronger and brighter.

SUPERIOR KNOWLEDGE.

A young man was walking through a wood with a gun over his shoulder and his bag full of game which he had shot. He was not satisfied with what he had, and was looking for more, when an excited man with a large tin badge on which was inscribed the one word "Sheriff" came running up to him and demanded: "Haven't you seen the signs which I put up on the trees in this woods?"

"Oh, yes, I saw them," answered the young man; "they said 'No Hunting,' but I found some."

THE PULPIT DUCK.

The younger son of the famous Archbishop Temple, William Temple, the new Canon of Westminster, has been described as the best elocutionist in the Church of England.

He is a Churchman with a great sense of humour, and is fond of telling the story of the curate who went to preach in a quiet country village, where a strange parson was unknown. He was met by the verger, who anxiously asked him if he would preach from the chancel.

"Why, my good man?" was the question.

"Well, your reverence," was the reply, "it's like this. I've a duck in the pulpit sitting on fourteen eggs."
