

You may have won the war, but we are winning far der beace, you see. And as regards the Leipzig trials, I beg you to excuse mine schmilcs.

THE WEEKLY ONTARIO.

THIS DAILY ONTARIO is published every afternoon (Sunday and holidays excepted) at The Ontario Building, Front Street, Belleville, Ont.

Subscription Rates—Daily Edition 1 yr. delivered, in city . . . $7.00 1 yr. by mail to rural offices . . . $8.00 1 yr. by mail to sea. del. . . $10.00 1 mo. to U. S. A. . . . $2.00

Advertising—The Ontario Job Printing Department is specially well equipped to turn out artistic and original job work, Modern Processes, New Type, Composite Workmen.

H. MORTON, J. C. BERRY, Business Managers, Editors-in-Chief.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 17, 1921

HALL USE BOWLERS

BELLEVILLE welcomes within her gates the visiting Bowlers and will endeavor to give them as good a time and as exciting a contest as they can play.

KILLING THE FIRE DRAGON

Evidently the heads of the Canadian Fire Chiefs are level. Accustomed day by day to face the hardest kind of conditions, not theories, they disregard flims and get down at once to facts.

THE NEXT GENERAL ELECTION

THE government will have to decide in the very near future whether it is in the national interest to stay in office, dependant upon the parliament of 1917, with vanishing moral, or to consult the people in a general election.

ALL FOR ONE

PREMIER Greenfield, of Alberta, in his first official pronouncement, declared that "I will do my best for the farmers and all classes of the Province of Alberta."

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

CONFLICTING reports come out of India. The other day some Canadian papers printed a story that Gandhi, the leader of the so-called passive-resistance movement which to all intents and purposes is a boycott of the British government and British goods, had recanted and undertaken to support a policy of co-operation with the constituted authorities.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

What is going on in India is evidently of first importance for the Empire, and we should have more reliable news than we get. This man, Gandhi, has had a remarkable career. At one time he was a J. in Johannesburg, earning it $15,000 a year. That he became an ascetic, because of a life of poverty would be a freedom to work for his countrymen.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

The funeral of the late Thomas Nightingale was held this morning from his late residence to St. Thomas Church, where Reverend Archdeacon Beazley held service in the presence of a large number of friends.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

As sufficient Farm Laborers have already gone to the West, the railways have been requested to cancel further excursions.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

So many Belleville officers and men, nursing wounds and others have seen Chu Chin Chow in His Majesty's Theatre, London—It almost was an institution in Old Seattle—and were now a sort of eyes of it in this country, that The Ontario prints the following from The Daily Telegraph (London) knowing it will be of special interest to them as it is to a lesser degree to all readers of this paper.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

"Chu Chin Chow" has not died gloriously. His end came last night with the 2238th performance of Oscar Asche and Rosalie Norton's "Musical Tale of the East" and the rites were truly impressive. (Our stagegoers, who packed His Majesty's, from floor to ceiling, saw to that. Mr. Asche had not written a threat for the occasion. He was content to announce, with staid fortitude and composure, seeing that the fate of his own offspring was concerned, "the absolute date of his (Chu Chin Chow's) death." Naturally everyone wanted to be there for the last scene, including those patriarchal players who remembered—or said they remembered—the birth of the illustrious Chinaman, and those comparatively young folk who thought they remembered sitting on their grandparents' knees and hearing them talk of that historic theatrical first night. And certainly as many were there as could squeeze in. But more, far more, were turned disappointed away. And, seriously, can you wonder at the fervent interest aroused by the bested every theatrical record in any part of the globe and made paltry by comparison the box-office figures revealed by any previous "record run"?

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

When he turned for his theme, to one of the most familiar of all the Arabian Nights tales Mr. Asche may possibly have had premonitions of a "thousand and one nights." But surely he can never have dreamt of a total of 2238 performances. Had he conceived of the bare possibility of such a thing, would he not have quailed at the prospect of playing the same part, year in and out, for a lifetime? Indeed, might not the devastating thought have turned him from his purpose and tempted him to strangle "Chu Chin Chow" at birth with his own pistol? But in that case Mr. Asche might have made a "Grand Guignol" play without, however, adding a chapter to theatrical history.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

We cannot say what was the longest vigil kept at the door of pit or gallery in preparation for the demise of the venerable Chinaman. But some enthusiasts, it is said, were to be seen there soon after the break of day, becoming garbed in the tokens of mourning. Among them were a few greybeards whose recollections of the first performance were overheard with something approaching awe by younger veterans. Also there was one Englishman who owned up to having spent the play seventy-nine times—stout fellow!—but there was nobody at His Majesty's last evening who then saw "Chu Chin Chow" exactly as he, or she, had seen it previously. For, in order that there should be no suspicion of maimed bits, the author-manager decreed the restoration of scenes and songs that had "dropped out" with the passing of years, and of others, again, that had taken their places and then been jettisoned in turn. It follows that Abu Hassan—to give the robber shayk his true name—was an unconscionable long time waiting, and that it was at a very late hour last night when those very pretty and picturesque revels that have always marked the fulfilment of Zai-Nat Al-Kulub's sinister prophecy were held.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

Throughout the long evening the theatre had resounded to wholehearted enthusiasm, Mr. Asche, his popular and accomplished wife, Miss Lily Brayton, Mr. Courtice Pounds, the cheeriest of All Baba's, and Miss Aileen O'Orme, the Alcolom adored of that reprobate, coming in naturally for special ovations. (It is worthy of note, by the way, that all the members of the original cast were still there with two exceptions, and that Mr. Norman Williams, the original Abdullah, returned specially just to resume once more his old role; also that two members of the 1916 company, Mr. Julian Cross and Mr. John Lacey, share the distinction of not having missed a single performance of the piece.)

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

But if the huge audience had been vastly demonstrative throughout, it yet seemed that they reserved to the end their warmest tributes. And so, with the falling of the curtain on the lovely Rose Garden scene, there was witnessed a scene of mighty emotion, which grew in volume when the curtain again lifted, Mr. Asche, still in the guise of the play's protagonist, appeared on the stage in response to calls for a speech. In the course of his remarks he referred feelingly to the fact that the performance had continued marked the close of the history of His Majesty's Theatre under the management of the Asche family, and he went on to pay tribute to the memory of Sir Herbert Tree, whose spirit, he said, must surely have been with them that night in the building he opened twenty-seven years ago. Incidentally he recalled his wife's first associations with that theatre in 1901, when she appeared as Viola in the lamented actor-manager's memorable revival of "Twelfth Night," and also his own Shakespearean season within its walls some five years later. There was loud cheering when he expressed the hope that negotiations now being completed would enable him to start a fresh season there in the autumn with a play—he added, amidst daughter-like tears of which much must be breathed, and that he would be able to do so on the high artistic traditions of the premier theatre of the English-speaking world.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

His speech ended, he summoned to his side Mrs. Asche, whose appearance was greeted with a fresh burst of cheering, and thereafter his collaborator, Mr. Norton, the popular theme of whose "Robbers' March" served as an accompaniment to the subsequent appearance in turn of every member of the "Chu Chin Chow" company, to all of whom, as well as to others besides, who had contributed in one way or another to the triumphant success of this piece he rendered suitable tributes. And, finally, turning to one of the stage boxes in which Dame Clara Butt was seated, he asked the distinguished singer to confer upon them all the favor of singing the National Anthem, as she had done at the opening of His Majesty's in 1897. This, he said, was the last time her "glorious voice" would be heard in this country for some months as she was to sail within a few hours for Australia for a tour of the British Dominions overseas. With what emphatic effect the famous singer responded to the request need not be described. And so ended a night truly historic in the long annals of the London stage.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

Every mother knows how fatal the hot summer months are to small children. Cholera, infantum, diarrhoea, erysipelas, colic and stomach troubles are rife at this time and often a precious little life is lost after only a few hours illness. The mother who keeps Baby's Own Tablets in the house feels safe. The occasional use of the Tablets prevent stomach and bowel troubles, or if the trouble comes suddenly—as it frequently does—the Tablets will break the baby safely through. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

The funeral was held this morning from his late residence to St. Thomas Church, where Reverend Archdeacon Beazley held service in the presence of a large number of friends. The interment was made in Belleville cemetery, the bearers being nephews of the deceased—L. Howell, R. Anderson, L. Wallbridge, J. Wallbridge, E. Wallbridge and T. Nightingale.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

As sufficient Farm Laborers have already gone to the West, the railways have been requested to cancel further excursions.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

So many Belleville officers and men, nursing wounds and others have seen Chu Chin Chow in His Majesty's Theatre, London—It almost was an institution in Old Seattle—and were now a sort of eyes of it in this country, that The Ontario prints the following from The Daily Telegraph (London) knowing it will be of special interest to them as it is to a lesser degree to all readers of this paper.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

"Chu Chin Chow" has not died gloriously. His end came last night with the 2238th performance of Oscar Asche and Rosalie Norton's "Musical Tale of the East" and the rites were truly impressive. (Our stagegoers, who packed His Majesty's, from floor to ceiling, saw to that. Mr. Asche had not written a threat for the occasion. He was content to announce, with staid fortitude and composure, seeing that the fate of his own offspring was concerned, "the absolute date of his (Chu Chin Chow's) death." Naturally everyone wanted to be there for the last scene, including those patriarchal players who remembered—or said they remembered—the birth of the illustrious Chinaman, and those comparatively young folk who thought they remembered sitting on their grandparents' knees and hearing them talk of that historic theatrical first night. And certainly as many were there as could squeeze in. But more, far more, were turned disappointed away. And, seriously, can you wonder at the fervent interest aroused by the bested every theatrical record in any part of the globe and made paltry by comparison the box-office figures revealed by any previous "record run"?

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

When he turned for his theme, to one of the most familiar of all the Arabian Nights tales Mr. Asche may possibly have had premonitions of a "thousand and one nights." But surely he can never have dreamt of a total of 2238 performances. Had he conceived of the bare possibility of such a thing, would he not have quailed at the prospect of playing the same part, year in and out, for a lifetime? Indeed, might not the devastating thought have turned him from his purpose and tempted him to strangle "Chu Chin Chow" at birth with his own pistol? But in that case Mr. Asche might have made a "Grand Guignol" play without, however, adding a chapter to theatrical history.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

We cannot say what was the longest vigil kept at the door of pit or gallery in preparation for the demise of the venerable Chinaman. But some enthusiasts, it is said, were to be seen there soon after the break of day, becoming garbed in the tokens of mourning. Among them were a few greybeards whose recollections of the first performance were overheard with something approaching awe by younger veterans. Also there was one Englishman who owned up to having spent the play seventy-nine times—stout fellow!—but there was nobody at His Majesty's last evening who then saw "Chu Chin Chow" exactly as he, or she, had seen it previously. For, in order that there should be no suspicion of maimed bits, the author-manager decreed the restoration of scenes and songs that had "dropped out" with the passing of years, and of others, again, that had taken their places and then been jettisoned in turn. It follows that Abu Hassan—to give the robber shayk his true name—was an unconscionable long time waiting, and that it was at a very late hour last night when those very pretty and picturesque revels that have always marked the fulfilment of Zai-Nat Al-Kulub's sinister prophecy were held.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

Throughout the long evening the theatre had resounded to wholehearted enthusiasm, Mr. Asche, his popular and accomplished wife, Miss Lily Brayton, Mr. Courtice Pounds, the cheeriest of All Baba's, and Miss Aileen O'Orme, the Alcolom adored of that reprobate, coming in naturally for special ovations. (It is worthy of note, by the way, that all the members of the original cast were still there with two exceptions, and that Mr. Norman Williams, the original Abdullah, returned specially just to resume once more his old role; also that two members of the 1916 company, Mr. Julian Cross and Mr. John Lacey, share the distinction of not having missed a single performance of the piece.)

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

But if the huge audience had been vastly demonstrative throughout, it yet seemed that they reserved to the end their warmest tributes. And so, with the falling of the curtain on the lovely Rose Garden scene, there was witnessed a scene of mighty emotion, which grew in volume when the curtain again lifted, Mr. Asche, still in the guise of the play's protagonist, appeared on the stage in response to calls for a speech. In the course of his remarks he referred feelingly to the fact that the performance had continued marked the close of the history of His Majesty's Theatre under the management of the Asche family, and he went on to pay tribute to the memory of Sir Herbert Tree, whose spirit, he said, must surely have been with them that night in the building he opened twenty-seven years ago. Incidentally he recalled his wife's first associations with that theatre in 1901, when she appeared as Viola in the lamented actor-manager's memorable revival of "Twelfth Night," and also his own Shakespearean season within its walls some five years later. There was loud cheering when he expressed the hope that negotiations now being completed would enable him to start a fresh season there in the autumn with a play—he added, amidst daughter-like tears of which much must be breathed, and that he would be able to do so on the high artistic traditions of the premier theatre of the English-speaking world.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

His speech ended, he summoned to his side Mrs. Asche, whose appearance was greeted with a fresh burst of cheering, and thereafter his collaborator, Mr. Norton, the popular theme of whose "Robbers' March" served as an accompaniment to the subsequent appearance in turn of every member of the "Chu Chin Chow" company, to all of whom, as well as to others besides, who had contributed in one way or another to the triumphant success of this piece he rendered suitable tributes. And, finally, turning to one of the stage boxes in which Dame Clara Butt was seated, he asked the distinguished singer to confer upon them all the favor of singing the National Anthem, as she had done at the opening of His Majesty's in 1897. This, he said, was the last time her "glorious voice" would be heard in this country for some months as she was to sail within a few hours for Australia for a tour of the British Dominions overseas. With what emphatic effect the famous singer responded to the request need not be described. And so ended a night truly historic in the long annals of the London stage.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

Every mother knows how fatal the hot summer months are to small children. Cholera, infantum, diarrhoea, erysipelas, colic and stomach troubles are rife at this time and often a precious little life is lost after only a few hours illness. The mother who keeps Baby's Own Tablets in the house feels safe. The occasional use of the Tablets prevent stomach and bowel troubles, or if the trouble comes suddenly—as it frequently does—the Tablets will break the baby safely through. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

The funeral was held this morning from his late residence to St. Thomas Church, where Reverend Archdeacon Beazley held service in the presence of a large number of friends. The interment was made in Belleville cemetery, the bearers being nephews of the deceased—L. Howell, R. Anderson, L. Wallbridge, J. Wallbridge, E. Wallbridge and T. Nightingale.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

As sufficient Farm Laborers have already gone to the West, the railways have been requested to cancel further excursions.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

So many Belleville officers and men, nursing wounds and others have seen Chu Chin Chow in His Majesty's Theatre, London—It almost was an institution in Old Seattle—and were now a sort of eyes of it in this country, that The Ontario prints the following from The Daily Telegraph (London) knowing it will be of special interest to them as it is to a lesser degree to all readers of this paper.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

"Chu Chin Chow" has not died gloriously. His end came last night with the 2238th performance of Oscar Asche and Rosalie Norton's "Musical Tale of the East" and the rites were truly impressive. (Our stagegoers, who packed His Majesty's, from floor to ceiling, saw to that. Mr. Asche had not written a threat for the occasion. He was content to announce, with staid fortitude and composure, seeing that the fate of his own offspring was concerned, "the absolute date of his (Chu Chin Chow's) death." Naturally everyone wanted to be there for the last scene, including those patriarchal players who remembered—or said they remembered—the birth of the illustrious Chinaman, and those comparatively young folk who thought they remembered sitting on their grandparents' knees and hearing them talk of that historic theatrical first night. And certainly as many were there as could squeeze in. But more, far more, were turned disappointed away. And, seriously, can you wonder at the fervent interest aroused by the bested every theatrical record in any part of the globe and made paltry by comparison the box-office figures revealed by any previous "record run"?

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

When he turned for his theme, to one of the most familiar of all the Arabian Nights tales Mr. Asche may possibly have had premonitions of a "thousand and one nights." But surely he can never have dreamt of a total of 2238 performances. Had he conceived of the bare possibility of such a thing, would he not have quailed at the prospect of playing the same part, year in and out, for a lifetime? Indeed, might not the devastating thought have turned him from his purpose and tempted him to strangle "Chu Chin Chow" at birth with his own pistol? But in that case Mr. Asche might have made a "Grand Guignol" play without, however, adding a chapter to theatrical history.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

We cannot say what was the longest vigil kept at the door of pit or gallery in preparation for the demise of the venerable Chinaman. But some enthusiasts, it is said, were to be seen there soon after the break of day, becoming garbed in the tokens of mourning. Among them were a few greybeards whose recollections of the first performance were overheard with something approaching awe by younger veterans. Also there was one Englishman who owned up to having spent the play seventy-nine times—stout fellow!—but there was nobody at His Majesty's last evening who then saw "Chu Chin Chow" exactly as he, or she, had seen it previously. For, in order that there should be no suspicion of maimed bits, the author-manager decreed the restoration of scenes and songs that had "dropped out" with the passing of years, and of others, again, that had taken their places and then been jettisoned in turn. It follows that Abu Hassan—to give the robber shayk his true name—was an unconscionable long time waiting, and that it was at a very late hour last night when those very pretty and picturesque revels that have always marked the fulfilment of Zai-Nat Al-Kulub's sinister prophecy were held.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

Throughout the long evening the theatre had resounded to wholehearted enthusiasm, Mr. Asche, his popular and accomplished wife, Miss Lily Brayton, Mr. Courtice Pounds, the cheeriest of All Baba's, and Miss Aileen O'Orme, the Alcolom adored of that reprobate, coming in naturally for special ovations. (It is worthy of note, by the way, that all the members of the original cast were still there with two exceptions, and that Mr. Norman Williams, the original Abdullah, returned specially just to resume once more his old role; also that two members of the 1916 company, Mr. Julian Cross and Mr. John Lacey, share the distinction of not having missed a single performance of the piece.)

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

But if the huge audience had been vastly demonstrative throughout, it yet seemed that they reserved to the end their warmest tributes. And so, with the falling of the curtain on the lovely Rose Garden scene, there was witnessed a scene of mighty emotion, which grew in volume when the curtain again lifted, Mr. Asche, still in the guise of the play's protagonist, appeared on the stage in response to calls for a speech. In the course of his remarks he referred feelingly to the fact that the performance had continued marked the close of the history of His Majesty's Theatre under the management of the Asche family, and he went on to pay tribute to the memory of Sir Herbert Tree, whose spirit, he said, must surely have been with them that night in the building he opened twenty-seven years ago. Incidentally he recalled his wife's first associations with that theatre in 1901, when she appeared as Viola in the lamented actor-manager's memorable revival of "Twelfth Night," and also his own Shakespearean season within its walls some five years later. There was loud cheering when he expressed the hope that negotiations now being completed would enable him to start a fresh season there in the autumn with a play—he added, amidst daughter-like tears of which much must be breathed, and that he would be able to do so on the high artistic traditions of the premier theatre of the English-speaking world.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

His speech ended, he summoned to his side Mrs. Asche, whose appearance was greeted with a fresh burst of cheering, and thereafter his collaborator, Mr. Norton, the popular theme of whose "Robbers' March" served as an accompaniment to the subsequent appearance in turn of every member of the "Chu Chin Chow" company, to all of whom, as well as to others besides, who had contributed in one way or another to the triumphant success of this piece he rendered suitable tributes. And, finally, turning to one of the stage boxes in which Dame Clara Butt was seated, he asked the distinguished singer to confer upon them all the favor of singing the National Anthem, as she had done at the opening of His Majesty's in 1897. This, he said, was the last time her "glorious voice" would be heard in this country for some months as she was to sail within a few hours for Australia for a tour of the British Dominions overseas. With what emphatic effect the famous singer responded to the request need not be described. And so ended a night truly historic in the long annals of the London stage.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

Every mother knows how fatal the hot summer months are to small children. Cholera, infantum, diarrhoea, erysipelas, colic and stomach troubles are rife at this time and often a precious little life is lost after only a few hours illness. The mother who keeps Baby's Own Tablets in the house feels safe. The occasional use of the Tablets prevent stomach and bowel troubles, or if the trouble comes suddenly—as it frequently does—the Tablets will break the baby safely through. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

The funeral was held this morning from his late residence to St. Thomas Church, where Reverend Archdeacon Beazley held service in the presence of a large number of friends. The interment was made in Belleville cemetery, the bearers being nephews of the deceased—L. Howell, R. Anderson, L. Wallbridge, J. Wallbridge, E. Wallbridge and T. Nightingale.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

As sufficient Farm Laborers have already gone to the West, the railways have been requested to cancel further excursions.

The End of Chu Chin Chow

Its 2238th Performance

So many Belleville officers and men, nursing wounds and others have seen Chu Chin Chow in His Majesty's Theatre, London—It almost was an institution in Old Seattle—and were now a sort of eyes of it in this country, that The Ontario prints the following from The Daily Telegraph (London) knowing it will be of special interest to them as it is to a lesser degree to all readers of this paper.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

"Chu Chin Chow" has not died gloriously. His end came last night with the 2238th performance of Oscar Asche and Rosalie Norton's "Musical Tale of the East" and the rites were truly impressive. (Our stagegoers, who packed His Majesty's, from floor to ceiling, saw to that. Mr. Asche had not written a threat for the occasion. He was content to announce, with staid fortitude and composure, seeing that the fate of his own offspring was concerned, "the absolute date of his (Chu Chin Chow's) death." Naturally everyone wanted to be there for the last scene, including those patriarchal players who remembered—or said they remembered—the birth of the illustrious Chinaman, and those comparatively young folk who thought they remembered sitting on their grandparents' knees and hearing them talk of that historic theatrical first night. And certainly as many were there as could squeeze in. But more, far more, were turned disappointed away. And, seriously, can you wonder at the fervent interest aroused by the bested every theatrical record in any part of the globe and made paltry by comparison the box-office figures revealed by any previous "record run"?

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

When he turned for his theme, to one of the most familiar of all the Arabian Nights tales Mr. Asche may possibly have had premonitions of a "thousand and one nights." But surely he can never have dreamt of a total of 2238 performances. Had he conceived of the bare possibility of such a thing, would he not have quailed at the prospect of playing the same part, year in and out, for a lifetime? Indeed, might not the devastating thought have turned him from his purpose and tempted him to strangle "Chu Chin Chow" at birth with his own pistol? But in that case Mr. Asche might have made a "Grand Guignol" play without, however, adding a chapter to theatrical history.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

We cannot say what was the longest vigil kept at the door of pit or gallery in preparation for the demise of the venerable Chinaman. But some enthusiasts, it is said, were to be seen there soon after the break of day, becoming garbed in the tokens of mourning. Among them were a few greybeards whose recollections of the first performance were overheard with something approaching awe by younger veterans. Also there was one Englishman who owned up to having spent the play seventy-nine times—stout fellow!—but there was nobody at His Majesty's last evening who then saw "Chu Chin Chow" exactly as he, or she, had seen it previously. For, in order that there should be no suspicion of maimed bits, the author-manager decreed the restoration of scenes and songs that had "dropped out" with the passing of years, and of others, again, that had taken their places and then been jettisoned in turn. It follows that Abu Hassan—to give the robber shayk his true name—was an unconscionable long time waiting, and that it was at a very late hour last night when those very pretty and picturesque revels that have always marked the fulfilment of Zai-Nat Al-Kulub's sinister prophecy were held.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

Throughout the long evening the theatre had resounded to wholehearted enthusiasm, Mr. Asche, his popular and accomplished wife, Miss Lily Brayton, Mr. Courtice Pounds, the cheeriest of All Baba's, and Miss Aileen O'Orme, the Alcolom adored of that reprobate, coming in naturally for special ovations. (It is worthy of note, by the way, that all the members of the original cast were still there with two exceptions, and that Mr. Norman Williams, the original Abdullah, returned specially just to resume once more his old role; also that two members of the 1916 company, Mr. Julian Cross and Mr. John Lacey, share the distinction of not having missed a single performance of the piece.)

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

But if the huge audience had been vastly demonstrative throughout, it yet seemed that they reserved to the end their warmest tributes. And so, with the falling of the curtain on the lovely Rose Garden scene, there was witnessed a scene of mighty emotion, which grew in volume when the curtain again lifted, Mr. Asche, still in the guise of the play's protagonist, appeared on the stage in response to calls for a speech. In the course of his remarks he referred feelingly to the fact that the performance had continued marked the close of the history of His Majesty's Theatre under the management of the Asche family, and he went on to pay tribute to the memory of Sir Herbert Tree, whose spirit, he said, must surely have been with them that night in the building he opened twenty-seven years ago. Incidentally he recalled his wife's first associations with that theatre in 1901, when she appeared as Viola in the lamented actor-manager's memorable revival of "Twelfth Night," and also his own Shakespearean season within its walls some five years later. There was loud cheering when he expressed the hope that negotiations now being completed would enable him to start a fresh season there in the autumn with a play—he added, amidst daughter-like tears of which much must be breathed, and that he would be able to do so on the high artistic traditions of the premier theatre of the English-speaking world.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

His speech ended, he summoned to his side Mrs. Asche, whose appearance was greeted with a fresh burst of cheering, and thereafter his collaborator, Mr. Norton, the popular theme of whose "Robbers' March" served as an accompaniment to the subsequent appearance in turn of every member of the "Chu Chin Chow" company, to all of whom, as well as to others besides, who had contributed in one way or another to the triumphant success of this piece he rendered suitable tributes. And, finally, turning to one of the stage boxes in which Dame Clara Butt was seated, he asked the distinguished singer to confer upon them all the favor of singing the National Anthem, as she had done at the opening of His Majesty's in 1897. This, he said, was the last time her "glorious voice" would be heard in this country for some months as she was to sail within a few hours for Australia for a tour of the British Dominions overseas. With what emphatic effect the famous singer responded to the request need not be described. And so ended a night truly historic in the long annals of the London stage.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

Every mother knows how fatal the hot summer months are to small children. Cholera, infantum, diarrhoea, erysipelas, colic and stomach troubles are rife at this time and often a precious little life is lost after only a few hours illness. The mother who keeps Baby's Own Tablets in the house feels safe. The occasional use of the Tablets prevent stomach and bowel troubles, or if the trouble comes suddenly—as it frequently does—the Tablets will break the baby safely through. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

The funeral was held this morning from his late residence to St. Thomas Church, where Reverend Archdeacon Beazley held service in the presence of a large number of friends. The interment was made in Belleville cemetery, the bearers being nephews of the deceased—L. Howell, R. Anderson, L. Wallbridge, J. Wallbridge, E. Wallbridge and T. Nightingale.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

As sufficient Farm Laborers have already gone to the West, the railways have been requested to cancel further excursions.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

So many Belleville officers and men, nursing wounds and others have seen Chu Chin Chow in His Majesty's Theatre, London—It almost was an institution in Old Seattle—and were now a sort of eyes of it in this country, that The Ontario prints the following from The Daily Telegraph (London) knowing it will be of special interest to them as it is to a lesser degree to all readers of this paper.

THE INDIAN MYSTERY

"Chu Chin Chow" has not died gloriously. His end came last night with the 2238th performance of Oscar Asche and Rosalie Norton's "Musical Tale of the East" and the rites were truly impressive. (Our stagegoers, who packed His Majesty's, from floor to ceiling, saw to that. Mr. Asche had not written a threat for the occasion. He was content to announce, with staid fortitude and composure, seeing that the fate of his own offspring was concerned, "the absolute date of his (Chu Chin Chow's) death." Naturally everyone wanted to be there for the last scene, including those patriarchal players who remembered—or said they remembered—the birth of the illustrious Chinaman, and those comparatively young folk who thought they remembered sitting on their grandparents' knees and hearing them talk of that historic theatrical first night. And certainly as many were there as could squeeze in. But more, far more, were turned disappointed away. And, seriously, can you wonder at the fervent interest aroused by the bested every theatrical record in any part of the globe and made paltry by comparison the box-office figures revealed by any previous "record run"?

IN THE ESTATE OF WILLIAM B. LINGHAM, DECEASED

All those who are indebted to the estate of William B. Lingham, late of the City of Belleville, and of the Village of Canfield, in the County of Hastings, are hereby notified that such accounts must be paid to the executor on or before the fifth day of September, 1921, to the undersigned. All accounts not arranged for by that date will be collected by legal process.

Dated this 11th day of August, 1921.
Rachel Jane Lingham,
Executrix Estate of W. B. Lingham,
14 Alexander Street,
Belleville, Ont.
A18-26 51w

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

IN HIS MAJESTY'S SUPREMACY COURT OF THE COUNTY OF HASTINGS—In the matter of the estate of George W. Burgess late of the Village of Belleville in the County of Hastings, Merchant, deceased.

NOTICE is hereby given pursuant to the Statute Act, Sec. 46, Chapter 12, R.S.O. 1914, that all persons having claims against the estate of the said George W. Burgess late of the Village of Belleville in the County of Hastings, Merchant, deceased, are requested to send by post prepaid to the undersigned on or before Saturday the 15th day of August 1921, their names and descriptions and a full statement of particulars of their claims and the nature of the securities thereon, and the same verified by Statutory Declaration and that after the day of the said 15th day of August 1921, the said administrator will distribute the estate of the said George W. Burgess late of the Village of Belleville in the County of Hastings, Merchant, deceased, to the persons entitled thereto, having regard only to the claims of