Rippling Rhymes

By Walt Mason.

THE ONE INTEREST.

I went last night to see the show, a play I've long adored; but little Eva's tale of woe just left me feeling bored. I saw Edna cross, the boy, but felt no pleasant thrill; for I was thinking of some way to can old Kaiser Bill. And Marks the lawyer hewed his gage, and failed to make me grin; my thoughts were all of battle flags and swords and martial din. I went to see the baseball game, with crores three or four; the pastor's pretty much the same as in the days of yore. But there was little whooping done, although the play was fine, for we were thinking of the Hun, of war across the brine. I knew not which team won or lost, and didn't seem to care; for everything on earth's a frost, since dogs "cover" there. I do not care for printed books, for music or for art; there's nothing new but war, and looks that stir my weary heart. I do not care for politics or for other things, for all their foolish bag of tricks I wouldn't give two wheels. I do not yearn for county fairs, for pinks in the park; I don't mortal things are fakes and snare, save war, and it's the goods. And it alone is worth our while, until our cause is won, until we've earned that thing of gale, the auto-graphic gun.
