NEARLY TEN MILLION MEN.

The Army From Which Uncle Sam May Draw Should Occasion Require.

In army of 9,900,000 men! How Napoelon's legions dwindle beside this, and the hosts which Grant, Sherman and Sheridan led shrink to pigmies, ears the Boston Journal.

This enormous figure represents the number of able-bodied men in the United States available for of fighters could ever be mobilized in this or any other country. It would overtax even American energy and resource to clothe and feed and arm them and maintain them in idleness. The figures have no practical military release to the country of the value, but as a suggestion of the mighty war potentialities of the young republic they are not without interes: to the world.

But when we come to enumerate the men actually under arms in the United States as trained and disciplined soldiers we realize our present military significance. Besides the little regular less thoroughly organized and equip-ped force of 112,190 men in the Na-tional Guard and graphs army of 25,000 men there is a more or tional Guard and militia. That is, only about one man in a hundred of those of our citizens liable to bear arms is regularly engaged in master-ing the rudiments of the soldier's pro-

New York, as might be expected, has the largest military organization—737 officers and 12,073 men. Pennsylvania has 8,614 officers and men; Ohio 6,125. Then comes Massachusetts well up in the list with 5,666. Flery South Carolina, with 5,440 officers and men, has an armed force out of all propor tion to its wealth and population. The New England States outside Massachusetts have respectable little armies ranging from Vermont's 784 to Connecticut's 2,761.

The Southern States have large mili-tia organizations, as a whole; the Western States very small ones. But the National Guard is steadily growing everywhere in numbers as in efficiency. It is fulfilling in a satisfactory way its purpose of perpetuating knowledge of military art, and would be found to be a respectable nucleus for a host of volunteers to rally on in an emergency.

The Highest Mountain. The question as to which of the American mountain summits wears the crown of highest position on the North American Continent, again assumes an interesting phase through the reported discovery of a mountain group in Alaska, in the region of Mount St. Elias, whose altitudinal determination would seem to depose both the Peak of Orizaba (Citlaltepetl) in Mexico and Mount St. Elias—the two peaks which have for some time held the position of honor, and which are so nearly of one height (18,300 and 18,200), that one might justly hesitate before finally awarding the palm for supremacy. The new mountains, possibly repre senting merely separated summits of a single mountain, upon which Mr. Israel Russell has bestowed the name of Mount Logan, are reputed to be 19,-500 feet in height, or fully equal to what was for many years assumed to be the true height of St. Elias.

The small angle of measurement through which the height of this mountain was computed does not permit us fully to accept the determination, and it is by no means unlikely that Mount Logan will, on closer scrutiny, share the fate which has befallen so many of the North American mountains, such as St. Elias, Mount Wrangell, Mount Hood etc.—decapitation. The niceties of absolute measurement in the case of a high mountain are such that only upon a most careful and repeated use of instruments can any dependence be placed, and this applies equally to determinations that are made by the angle and the barometic methods. At the present moment, the height of what has been assumed to be one of the most accurately determined summits of the Karakoram Range of India-Mount Godwin Austen, or Khas been brought into question, and only recently a resurvey of the Australian Alps has restored Mount Kosciusko, with a height of 7,336 feet, to the first position among the Australfan mountains, its rival, Mueller's Peak, whose crown has received a special accumulation of visiting cards, scraps of paper, addressed envelopes, etc., in recognition of its claims to su-periority, falls short by sixty-eight

The discrepancies in the result of mountain measurements are such that one is tempted to ask: Are the re-sults obtained by a single investigator worthy of full confidence? The peronal element-by which we mean not only the desires and non-desires in a determination, but the method of hand-ling the instruments, the kinds of allowances that are made for instrumental and ocular aberrations, and the uniformity and similarity of the checks that are used to counteract these aberrations enters so largely, and seemingly so constantly, into any calculation, as to make this almost individual or approximate, rather than positive. Otherwise, indeed, it becomes difficult to explain the differences of results that are obtained by equally competent observers-differences that are in many cases far too great to be explained away on the as-sumption of special difficulties of measurement. To mention only a few. of the higher American summits, toward the measurement of which no special difficulty ought to have been encountered: Aconcagua has been oscillating between 22,400 and 23,900 feet; Chimborazo between 20,000 and 21,400 feet; the Illampu between 22,-20,000 feet; the inample between 17,400 and 25,000 feet; Orizaba between 17,400 and 18,300 feet; St. Elias between 14,000 and 19,500 feet; Ixtacethuatl between 15,700 and 16,900 feet. It would almost seem as if there were certain factors involved in mountain measurement which have not yet been fully taken account of, for it is difficult to explain such broad differences on the theory of individual methods alone.—Prof. Angelo Heliprin, in the New Science Review.

The Language of Nature. A young lady at a Boston dinner table upon remarking that "We have had a very torrid month" received the response from a perspiring young man on the other side of the table. "Yes, and a durned bot one, toe." Human nature is much tempted to speak to the point of high temperatures. Boston Globe. AN ATHLETIC BELLE

Mrs. John Jacob Astor, or as she Mrs. John Jacob Astor, or as she is most familiarly called, Mrs. "Jack" Astor, is the best all-round sportswoman either in or out of society's realm, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. She fences, rides, rows, shoots, bowla, plays tennis, billiards, swims, can manage a bicycle with the most skilful as well as a yacht, and her least accomplishment is zoif. From a child accomplishment is golf. From a child she has always been particularly fond of all out-door sports. Philadelphians remember well the pretty rosy-faced Ava Willing, who, in a severe black habit, her satiny hair caught up unded riding cap with a black ribbon, galloped through Fairmont Park every pleasent winter afternoon.

At tennis she was always proficient.

At tennis she was always proneau. To-day she plays as strong a game as a man. Every Wednesday afternoon last winter she and her husband spent in the tennis court of the tennis building. She delights in singles, and rarely fails in beating her opponent. She makes the prettiest sort of a picture in her white tennis shoes and a tennis suit of black, which nearly escapes her ankles. capes her ankles.

Last summer her feats in the water excited the envy of many a timid belie at Newport. She is a most accom-plished and fearless swimmer, and when in the water wears black silk tights under her skirt, because they give her unrestricted liberty of limb. Another accomplishment which few women possess is her cleverness with the cue. She learned as a child, being familiar with billiards almost from her infancy. To-day Mrs. Astor plays as well, if not better, than any woman in this country. Both she and her husband are fond of the game. It is said that Mrs. Astor's ambition in reference to billiards is due to her desire to be a worthy opponent of Mr. Astor.

Perhaps there is nothing this clever little lady does so well as shoot.

A story told of Mrs. Astor in the Adisondacks, by Ross Hayes, one of the guides, is interesting, and shows that with all her sporting zest, she is still a woman, and a very womanly, woman at that.

She and her husband, with a party, were hunting several years ago, be-low Saranac. They had followed the trail of a wounded deer, which had escaped. Finally, after tracing it for an bour, it was cornered. A shot in the throat ended the stag's misery. As it fell, its great eyes seemed to fall beseechingly on Mrs. Astor. As the anxious dogs flew at its throat she burst into tears, and begged that the dogs be called off. Up to that moment she had been as much of a sportsman as any of them, but the sight of misery aroused all her womanly feeling.

In hunting costume of brown velvet, with buckskin leggins, alpine hat, game bag and a gun over her shoulder, Mrs. Astor could not look better in the most exquisite importation from Paris.

Ancient and Medern Greece A patriotic Greek merchant, of Al-giers, recently made an offer to the Hellenic Government, at Athens, of 500,000 drachmas $90,000 for the purpose of re-establishing the Olympic games, which passed away with the glory of ancient Greece in the Fourth Century, after an existence of nearly 1,200 years. In making this offer the intending donor revives the argument of his illustrious ancestors by reterating that the body of man has a glory as well as his intellect and spirit, and men best honor their Creator. He adds that many of the disadvantages under which the Greeks of to-day inbor may be done away with by a national movement in favor of better physical end manual training, and that he is willing to contribute to that is in a picturesque part of the Pelo-ponnesus, on the north bank of the River Rouphia—the ancient Alphaeus -and about ten miles from the modern town of Pyrgo. The whole pian area is the property of the Greek Government, which, it is reasonable to suppose, in view of the present de-pleted condition of its exchequer if from no other motive, will doubtless accept the offer just made. A part of the sum is to go as a bonus to the of the sum is to go as a bonus to the Government, the remainder to serve as a fund for the improvement of the ground and for the purchase of prizes for successful participants. In this latter respect the modern Olympic games will differ from these of ancient times, when the prizes were bomorary, not substantial.

of the modern Greek is his lack of physical and mannel training, both of which have been sacrificed upon the altar of excessive mental training. The love of learning which so conusly characterized the Greeks of old is immete in their descendants of to-day. When Greece regained her independence, more than sixty years independence, more than sixty years asse, and the entire length and breadth of the land was smoldering breadth of the land was smoldering from the Turkish firebrands, one of the first steps of its Boule—its national council—was to assemble under the olive trees of the Epidgurus and Strimate plans for public education. It was decided to have free schools everywhere, and to push the publication of all kinds of periodicals. The language was to be modeled upon the Greek of St. John's Gespel, and thereby purified of the barbarisms which had been bequeathed to it by which had been bequeathed to it by centuries of Venetian and Turkish oppression. From the overzealous carrying out of this programme Greece to to-day the most education-oursed country in the world. The streets of its towns teem with men of every species of academical degree men who speak and write a half-dozen different languages, but who, education being a drug in the market and manual training an unknown quantity, would be glad to earn a cent by blacking shoes.

Mother Ashamed to Take Him Out. Everything Failed to Cure. CUTICURA Cured in 3 Days.

I have had my baby sick with his face full of ringworm, and tried everything and failed. I was sahamed to take him out, for every one would look at him. I was told to get CUTICURA. I got it on Wednesday, and by Saturday his face was all dried up. Now I can take him everywhere. I cannot say enough about CUTICURA. If people only knew about how his face looked a week agy, and see it to-day, they would never be without it.

The people in the house can tell you how his face was, and how it is to-day.

CRAZY WITH ITCHING Eozema on Head. Got Into the Eyes. Doctor & Institutes Could Not Cure. Cured in 2 Months by CUTICURA.

I have been troubled over two years with ecrema on the top of my head. It first started to itch, something fierce. My doctor said it was ecrema, and treated me for six months, which eczema, and treated me for six months, which failure, so I tried more doctors, but they did the same, I tried a New York institute, which treated me for six months, but could not reach any further than the rest. I had it worse than from the start, as it commenced to get in my eyes, and nearly got me crazy with itching. I noticed your advertisement in the N. Y. World, and thought I would try Curicuma remedies. In two months' time I did not know that I had any trouble at all, and I feel like a new man now. ALFRED MEISEL, Oct. 12, 1898. 625 W. 48th St., N. Y. THE WATCHWARD OF WOMEN.

Modesty is woman's watchward. Whatever threatens her delicate sense of modesty, frightens her. For this reason many a woman permits dis-eases of the delicate womanly organs to become aggravated because she can-not bring herself to submit to the ordeal of unpleasant questionings, of-fensive examinations, and obnoxious local treatments, which some physicians find necessary. Doubtless thou-sands of the women who have taken advantage of Dr. Pierce's offer of free consultation by letter, have been led do so by the escape thus offered from treatment repugnant to modesty. a treatment repugnant to modesty.
