WHY WE FIND IT SMALL.

Among the many familiar bromidioms which pop out of someone's mouth whenever certain conditions arise, as surely as a stick of gum pops out of a gum machine when you drop in a penny, is the remark, "How small this world is."

It is made whenever someone runs across an old friend or acquaintance in a new setting, or finds that a new friend knows one of his old friends. And it really is startling how often his happens.

Why I Said It.

Here is what happened to me the other day. I was looking for rooms in the city intending to make a short stay there. I was shown a room which I was told a woman who had lived there some years had just vacated because on account of a cough, her doctor had told her she ought to go into the country.

I did not take the room but finally settled in a little inn some miles out. The first day I was there, when looking over the house mail for my own, I noticed a letter for one of the nests, forwarded from the city house where I had looked at the room vacated by the woman with the cough. My guess was subsequently verified. It was she, and inevitably I made the above remark. "How small this world is."

Whereupon the Authorman said thoughtfully: "When you come right down to it, you don't really mean how small this world is. What you mean is, how small a portion of this world we touch elbows with."

The point about this running up against people you've heard of," he went on to elaborate, "or meeting your friends in unexpected places, is that we each of us travel around in a comparatively small class of people who do more or less the same sort of things that we do."

"If you go to a city with 500,000 people in it and stay a week and meet two or three people you know in the shops and some more at your hotel and some more at the theatre, you think it is remarkable that when you only know 100 people out of that 500,000 you should meet ten of them. But the point is that the 100 you meet are apt to go to the same shops and the same hotels and the same theatres that you do and therefore the chances of your meeting them are that much more greatly increased."

We All Travel in a Groove. "It is so with everyone. Each of us is placed in a certain groove by his income, his business interests and his general interests. One's friends usually have approximate incomes, and similar interests in some way to one's own, and because of this follow a certain groove. So it isn't so strange, after all, that one is always meeting the same people, is it?"

And I admitted that it wasn't.

An Unholy Alliance.

Editor Evening Telegram
Dear Sir—An appealing to all decent, unprejudiced people. In the past few weeks an unholy alliance has been brought about between the extreme prohibitionists and the hard drinkers in this community. Both desire to see the Plebiscite Bill defeated or deferred. The Prohibitionist, who is a fanatic on the subject, wants to save the name of Prohibition, though the town itself is wide open. The hard drinkers do not care what the law is, or what it is called, as long as they are able to get all they want, and everybody who moves around among them knows that they have no difficulty in getting it by the gallon.

The proposition of the Moderate Prohibitionists, while technically allowing more drink, actually gives people less than they can now get; because a well-observed moderate law will control the traffic much better than a stringent law which is broken openly. We Moderates consequently have against us both the extreme "dry" and the extreme "wet," both of whom are anxious that there should be no plebiscite.

We are desirous of swinging to the side of law and order all the decent-minded people of this country. We cannot afford to bring up our children to look upon the law as a joke. That is to sow with liberal hands the seeds of bloody revolution. We want the law respected: at present it is laughed at. The police confess themselves unable to enforce it, because public opinion is against it. Let us, by all means, have a law which will command respect.

Let every decent citizen, therefore, bring every pressure to bear upon our legislators so that the matter may be placed before the people of the country to decide, and be by them decided. This can be done by writing members of the Legislature and by attending public meetings everywhere.

Yours truly,
WARWICK SMITH, Chairman, Moderate Prohibition Committee.

Nfld. Poultry Association.

Vice-President John Calver presided at last night's meeting in the Board of Trade Rooms in the absence of the President, H. W. Messerlior, Esq., C.M.G., and Secretary Stanley White read the minutes and reports. The number of hatching eggs sold this spring amounted to over two thousand and five hundred eggs, showing that more people than ever before are becoming interested in standard stock. Preliminary arrangements were discussed about the proposed poultry show in November, and it is hoped to arrange for a big competition in fowls, geese, etc. A letter was read from Professor J. P. Landry, of Truro Agricultural College, showing he is still interested in the Nfld. Poultry Association's work, of which he was one of the first organizers. He sent greetings to all the members and suggested that the Association start an egg-laying competition this fall amongst the various breeds, and refers to Judge Reid, the Nfld. expert in these matters to assist in making the arrangements for the same. The Association discussed last night the advisability of incorporating a limited liability company, and buying a farm, to be conducted as an experiment in order to prove that poultry farming can pay big dividends in this country.

Expensive—If True.

During the next six years babies will arrive by twos, threes, and even fours, and single births will be exceptional, is the prediction made by Professor Charles Kirschhoff, of Milwaukee, who, says the Central News, bases his prophecy on the influence of the planets Mars and Venus—Daily Mirror.

Dear Sir—Sir Michael Cashin, from his place in the House of Assembly criticizing the Government for its delay in putting the revenue protection service into operation, said among other things that owing to the absence of this protection "there was free trade on the Southwest Coast." If dame rumour may be trusted Sir Michael might, in a minor degree, have applied this remark to the West Coast as well, as far as at least some of its water-borne traffic is concerned. Why even our little mail boat which makes periodical trips to a Canadian port is not above suspicion. Thank goodness it is not the despised "French element" that is mixed up in this business which needs so much lying, deceit and misrepresentation to pull it off, but rather, if report be correct, some enlightened down-easters who have settled here from certain outport districts North of St. John's. Verily we have fallen on parlous times when falsehood, cunning, hypocrisy and perhaps greater crimes are exalted at the expense of right, truth and justice.

veterans of National Day.

Mr. Geo. W. B. Ayre informs the Telegram that the War Veterans, the N.I.W.A. The Unemployed Workers, The T. A. Society, Mr. Arthur Williams, District Deputy S.O.B., Mr. W. J. Higgins, President D.I.S., Mr. G. J. Cahill, Grand Knight of Knights of Columbus, Mr. Joseph Long, President C.B.I., Mr. Walter A. O'D. Kelly and many more representative citizens have all endorsed the keeping of June 24th, the date of the discovery of Newfoundland, as a public holiday.

A Talented Young Newfoundlander.

We are pleased to publish that news was received from Mount St. Clair Academy, Clifton, Iowa, that Miss Bride Hearn, youngest daughter of Surveyor J. P. Hearn of Brigus, has shown exceptional ability during the regular examination in that famous Academy. The young lady is only thirteen years of age, and in United States history she secured the possible number of marks, six, 100. Her general average on all subjects was 88, and the lowest 89. Mr. Hearn's other daughter, Mary, has already taken the white veil in the Franciscan Order of Mount St. Clair, and will be duly professed and receive the black veil on the 15th of August next. The Telegram heartily congratulates the talented young lady upon her success, which is another proof, if such were needed, that our Newfoundland boys and girls can hold their own against all competitors, and very often, as in this instance, come out at the head of the class.
