LADY IRIS' MISTAKE;
— or the —
Hero of 'Surata'

CHAPTER XXIV.

"I hope so. But he fell back as though the words had struck him like a blow.

"I shall always remember," she said, "that I owe much to you. It was through you, indirectly, that I met Captain Osburn first. I—sometimes think that in the past I was a little proud, a little harsh to you, Mr. Bardon. One sees things so much more clearly in the light of a great love. Love comes direct from Heaven, I believe."

He answered her by a moan of pain, which she did not notice.

"I am so happy," she said, "that I cannot help wishing every one else was the same. I cannot help feeling kindly toward every one. If I have been proud or hard, you will forgive me now, will you not, Mr. Bardon?"—and she again held out her hand to him.

He hardly dared trust himself to touch it or look into her smiling face. His pain and his passion were so great that he could have struck her dead in the pride of her grace and loveliness.

"I am glad you are happy," he said at last. "I have nothing to forgive. You will know more of that later on. Has Captain Osburn told you the romance I spoke of?"

"No," she replied, "not yet."

"Ask him to do so; and when you hear it remember that it was I who planned, after listening to it, to bring you together, knowing how well such a romance would suit you."

"I will remember," she answered, with a happy smile. "Heaven bless you for all the happiness you have helped to give me!"

CHAPTER XXV.

Lady Iris Payne and John Bardon conversed yet a little longer on the terrace at Chandos. The strangeness of his manner at last struck the heiress, and, looking earnestly at him, she said—

"You do not seem well this morning, Mr. Bardon."

But he would not meet the clear, kindly eyes.

"I am well enough," he replied brusquely. "I wish I were not one half so strong. I shall live on while happier men die."

"You are low-spirited," she remarked. "Why should a man like you, blessed with everything worth having in life, be troubled with such doleful thoughts? One smile from your little son should drive dull care away."

"You are right," was the answer. "Blessed with such a child, I ought not to know care. Good-morning, Lady Iris."

When he left her, he did as he had

CUTICURA HEALS ITCHY SCALP
Was Sore and Red. Hair Fell Out. Head Disfigured.

"From using the same wash and comb as my sister, whose scalp was troubled with dandruff, it caused my scalp to be itchy. My scalp was sore and red, and the dandruff peeled off and could be seen on my clothing. My hair fell out gradually and my head was disfigured. This trouble lasted six months. Then I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I afterwards bought more, and I only used two cakes of Soap and two boxes of Ointment when I was healed." (Signed) Miss Frances Burns, St. Basile, Quebec.

"Use Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Cuticura Pills." (Signed) Miss Frances Burns, St. Basile, Quebec.

Captain Osburn took from his pocket a little morocco case.

"My darling," he said, "early this morning I rode over to King's Forest to get this. I am almost ashamed to offer it to you. I wish I had some grand family heirloom to give you; but I have not, and," he added with a smile, "you know the reason why."

He opened the case, and in it lay a superb ring set with diamonds and rubies. He took the ring from the case.

"You will let me put it on your finger, Iris? It is an engagement ring—a ring that binds you to me almost as a wedding-ring would."

She held out her hand to him, and he placed the ring upon her finger.

"It fits you exactly," he said; "and I look upon that as a good omen. Promise me, Iris, that you will wear this ring all your life."

"I promise," she replied; "and I promise even more, Allan. It shall be buried with me!"

He kissed the loving face raised to his.

"Thank you," he said simply. "So long as you wear that ring I shall know that you are true to me—that you love me, and no one else; but, if ever I see this sweet, white hand without the ring, I shall know that you have forgotten me—ceased to care for me, and perhaps even love some one else."

"I am quite willing to submit to the test," she replied. "If—which, thank Heaven, is impossible!—something should part us now, and for twenty years you saw and heard nothing of me, and on your return you looked to see if I wore the ring, you would know at once, if I did so, that, despite time and absence, I had been true to you. If no ring shone upon my hand, you would know that I had forgotten you. Is that it, Allan?"

"Yes," he answered briefly.

"You would find it there, my own," she continued, "if you were absent thirty years, and I lived so long. I may live many years, but I shall have only one love."

"I wonder," she cried, "that you should love me so much!"

She laughed the sweet happy laugh that always gladdened his heart.

"I was thinking this morning, Allan," she said, "that life is much shorter than love. If I live to be a hundred years old, and I tried every day to tell you how much I loved you, I could not—life would not be long enough. I wonder if other lovers are happy in thinking about their future as we are?"

"I do not believe that any one was ever so happy," he replied, "and for the best of all reasons—I do not think any one ever loved so much as we do!"

LIFE WAS MISERY!

"I was reading the other day about Neurasthenia, about the large number of people who were troubled with this disease. It is just what my wife had. She felt miserable all the time and was constantly depressed. She would wake in the morning and tell me that something dreadful was going to happen that day. Life was nothing short of misery for her. She was so depressed that I expected she would lose her mind and have to go to a sanitarium and I kept wondering how I would get the money to pay for her. She could not eat and had no appetite for food. She was irritable and cranky most of the time. If she was crossed in any way, she would immediately work herself up into a violent temper. This worried me because she had always had a kind and gentle disposition and nothing which was said or done seemed to irritate her. I spoke to our family doctor about her and he said that her trouble was imagination and that if she would try and forget about her depression and look on the bright side of life she would be all right. Of course I didn't dare tell her this because I knew she would get into one of her tempers. When she got over these fits of temper, she was always weak and ill and more depressed than ever. The doctor said a tonic might help her and gave me a prescription but this did not do her any good. She tried all kinds of other tonics with the same result. Carnol was recommended to me and I wish to state that it is the leader of all tonics. Since taking it my wife has changed completely. Now she is always ready for her meals and work is no burden. It is a pleasure for me to recommend Carnol to anyone who is in need of a tonic or a body builder. Excuse me for writing this letter but I want you to accept my thanks for that wonderful tonic known as Carnol.—Mr. S. M., Toronto.

Carnol is sold by your druggist, and if you can conscientiously say, after you have tried it, that it hasn't done you any good, return the empty bottle to him and he will refund your money. 7-622

Just Folks.

WHEN REDSKINS BIT THE DUST.
Do you remember the days that were the days of "Chunky" and Bill and Joe?
And you and I and the thrill and stir
Of the books we read in the long ago,
"The trashy things," as our parents said,
And frequently burned in their deep disgust,
And the joy of us as we sat and read:
"Then two more redskins bit the dust!"

Those were the days of the Golden West,
The days of Custer and Buffalo Bill,
When we followed the scouts to the mountains crest,
And breathlessly watched them curling smoke,
The signs of fear and the guides to trust,
And we thrilled with joy when the rifles spoke,
And two more redskins bit the dust.

Out in the barn in those golden days,
In a secret place where our pamphlets hid,
And there we followed the trapper's ways,
And gloried in all that they said or did.
Adventure gripped at each youthful throat,
For we knew the meaning of savage lust,
But this was the line that we loved to quote:
"Then two more redskins bit the dust!"

Now we have boys and they're reading books,
Books of splendor and books of war,
But the tales we kept in our secret nooks
Have passed away from this bettered era.
And I sit and I smile as I watch them there,
And I think of the days when our tales were just
The bark of rifles upon the air—
"And two more redskins bit the dust!"

A good dinner deserves a good cigarette, a bad dinner needs one. Let your choice be CUB.

GOING STRONG.

There is always something wrong, something fierce that threatens doom, but the country jogs along and emerges from the gloom. Uncle Sam is hard to stay, hard to smother in despair; and he trots along his way with his coat-tails in the air. Just a little while ago everything seemed on the blink, and we went and lapped up woe as our daily food and drink. Every prospect was a frost, there would be no coal to burn, and a cord of wood would cost more than any man could earn. All the trains would cease to run, transportation would collapse; all the world seemed bleak and dun, there were tears upon our maps. Even chronic Sunny Jims shook their heads and sighed, "Alas! We can't sing our cheer-up hymns for this crisis will not pass. We are up against it now, every day new ills appear, and the statesman beats his brow in extremity of fear." But the country jogs along, and the smiling statesman says, "We are surely going strong, better times will come this way. There will shortly be a boom that will knock the records cold; we're emerging from the gloom, and our skies are bright as gold."

Onion skins boiled in stock give a nice color.

A little cheese flavoring improves stuffed baked potatoes.

To save sugar and afford variety, cook cereal with raisins.

Grate carrots on a coarse grater, using a downward stroke.

Silk gloves should always be turned wrong side out before washing. Be sure that all your rosy vegetables are stored in a dry place.

Cranberry jelly makes an attractive garnish for salads and desserts.

Ginger preserved in syrup is excellent served over vanilla ice cream.

An excellent idea is to add a little cranberry sauce to your muffin batter.

Every bit of batter can be scraped from the bowl if one has a dependable spatula.

If the gravy for your roast is not dark enough, add the meat juice that has been separated from the fat or other roasts.
