

The Best Shops Throughout the World Sell Sunlight Soap

PIN THIS UP TO YOUR KITCHEN WALL
FOLLOW DIRECTIONS AND SAVE MONEY

Use Sunlight Soap in this way which saves time and trouble. Put your linen and cotton clothes to soak in cold water overnight, or for at least two hours. Wringing out in the morning, then rub each article with Sunlight Soap, see that you put Soap on all of each article. Roll each article tightly and place the entire wash in a tub of hot water.

LEAVE SUNLIGHT SOAP ONE HOUR TO DO ITS WORK

Then rub the clothes lightly on the washboard, turn each garment in-side out and rub Sunlight Soap on the seams and soiled places. Next, rinse in lukewarm or tepid water, wring out and hang up to dry.

THE SUNLIGHT WAY IS THE EASIEST WAY

For woollens and flannels first shake each article well to get rid of loose dust. Cut a piece of Sunlight Soap into chips or flakes, put the chips of Sunlight into a pan of boiling water and make a good lather. Wait until the water becomes lukewarm, then wash out each article in this lather without rubbing. Don't use the washboard, let Sunlight Soap do the hard work. Squeeze out the water, don't twist. Rinse well in two relays of lukewarm water. Squeeze out the surplus water, don't twist. Hang up the clothes to dry.

and Consequently Save Your Money

SPEAKING OF POPULAR SONGS.

"Where," said the Authorman, "could it come from except from a popular song? And why do you demand my sense from a popular song? Has your experience taught you that that is the place to look for sense? And starting from that we held a symposium on popular songs we could remember and their sometimes engaging and sometimes disgusting idiocies.

"And I Had But Fifty Cents!"

One of our earliest recollections (I will risk detection by admitting that I have a memory of hearing the flappers of that day sing it, though I insist that I was not old enough to sing it myself) was: "She said she wasn't hungry but this is what she ate." Perhaps some Reader Friend who is not afraid to give data bearing on his age can help me remember exactly what she ate. Ice cream and cold cream, fish balls and cannon balls are all of her diet that still sticks in my mind. But of course I do know the tag line: "And I had but 50 cents."

The song which ended: "Can't get away to marry you to-day, my wife won't let me," was of the ironic class whose humor really seemed to have a little more sense behind it, and we all agreed that we had enjoyed that.

"Poor John" was another of the old popular songs that did not depend either on absolute idiosyncrasy or on sentimentality for its appeal, and that got a unanimous vote of thanks.

The Tree Song.

The tree songs were an interesting example of the way one song may breed a whole litter. I thought the original ancestor was "Under the Bamboo Tree," but my neighbor reminded me of, "In the Shade of the Sheltering Palm," a rather serious affair as we remembered it. But from the seed of the palm came several kinds of trees, some sentimental and some frankly meant to be humorous. There was the old apple tree, and the bamboo tree, and the banana tree, and we felt there were others we could not recall. (Again I appeal to Reader Friends not too sensitive on the subject of age.)

Which Do You Think?

We could not agree on the palm for the most idiotic lyric. The Authorman wanted to give it to:

"Chinatown, my Chinatown, when the lights are low.

CUTTING THINGS OUT.

WALT MASON.

"Oh, cut out this, and cut out that," the docs have told me, all my days; "you eat too much, you are too fat, cut out the pork and live on maise." I did not heed their warning words, on winds rich I'd dine and sup; I laughed to scorn those wise old birds, and still you see me right side up. "Cut out the pipe," I've often told, by earnest friends who wished me well; "the nicotine will knock you cold, or send you to a padded cell. Tobacco is a filthy weed, it knocks your morals out of plumb, it makes you blind and broken-kneed—cut out the pipe and chew spruce gum." I did not heed the things they said, and at my pipe I tolled away; the smoke wreaths eddy round my head, and I am still on earth to-day. And ever as I smoke I see the hearse go past my garden wall, containing bodies, two or three, of men who did not smoke at all. And in the padded cells I find poor drooling gents who used to bet that smoke would paralyze my mind—and their misfortunes I regret. "Oh, cut out that and cut out this," some folks are crying evermore; they'd have us cancel all the bliss, and make of life a grievous bore. And some who make the loudest noise, don't sacrifice, to great extent; they don't forego their little joys, their tishorn habits, worth a cent.

An unusually delicious filling for a layer cake is made with blackberries. Beat half cupful of butter until creamy, and one cupful sugar, one and a half cupful of blackberries and half cupful of cream beaten stiff.

More Home (Un)truths.

"The bride looked a perfect fright," wrote the Society reporter; "but the bridegroom, who was tastefully attired in the usual black, looked charming, and was the centre of all eyes." "No, sir," remarked the clerk, "I feel that I cannot accept a rise. I am not worth it, and I think you are paying me more now than you should, and so does my wife." "I love school, and I am awfully fond of my teachers. I always pay attention, and like to learn all I can. I hate the idea of holidays!" said the child from round the corner to us the other day. "I never powder my nose," remarked a flapper to us recently. "I think it looks so silly for a girl to powder her nose in the street or office!" "My dear," said the husband to his wife, "you look so tired to-night that I think I will stay away from the club and do the washing-up for you!"

Cook apricots in a sugar and water syrup, cool, place in a serving dish, sprinkle with chopped peanut brittle, cover with sweetened whipped cream and more brittle and chill.

Another Promotion.

A certain Colonel X., who was always hard-up, was unable to pay his tailor's bill, and, as he had no money with which to settle, he offered to introduce the sartorial gentleman into Society instead. This was agreed to, and the colonel asked the tailor to a dinner he was giving during the following week. When the tailor arrived he was so well-turned-out in perfectly fitting evening-dress that the colonel did not recognize him, and as he shook hands he said: "Pardon me, my dear fellow, but I have quite forgotten your name." "Very likely," replied the tailor in a low, sneering voice. "I made your toga."

"Oh, quite!" said the colonel, with a smile. "My dear," he added, turning to his wife, "may I introduce you to Major Toggs."

Sees Safety in Parachutes.

LONDON, July 18.—(A.P.)—Gathering his figures from all over the world, E. R. Calthorp declares there were 90 crashes of airplanes during the six months ended June 30. One hundred and six persons were killed in these accidents, and 64 were injured.

Mr. Calthorp says it is only by the introduction of parachutes, and the capable use of them, that fatalities can be materially reduced.

MAKING CERTAIN.

A woman of uncertain age went to the inquiry office at the terminus and asked when the next train left for Bradford, and the answer she received was, "Twenty minutes to eleven." She looked doubtfully at the man and went to one of the seats. In a few minutes there was an exchange of clerks. She promptly went to the window and repeated the question. This time she was told that the train left at "ten-forty."

"There," said she in triumph, "was sure than the other man knew!"
