No Eye Like the Master's Eye."

You are master of your health, and if you do not attend to duty, the blame is easily located. If your blood is out of order, Hood's Sarsaparilla will purify it.

It is the specific remedy for troubles of the blood, kidneys, bowels or liver. Heart Trouble—"I had heart trouble for a number of years and different medicines failed to benefit me. I tried Hood's Sarssparilla and three bottles completely and perfectly cured me." Mrs. C. A. FLINN, Wallace Bridge, N. S.

A Safeguard—"As I had lost five children with diphtheria I gave my remaining two children Hood's Sarsaparilla as they were subject to throat trouble and were not very strong. They are now healthier and stronger and have not since had a cold." Mrs. W. H. FLECKER, Pembroke, Ont.

A SEWING CROW.

The Marvelous Patience and Ingens. ity Displayed by the Bird.

Perhaps of all my birds the one I called Perhaps of all my birds the one I called the sewing crow was the most anusing. It was a glossy black bird about the size of a thrush, with pale yellow tail and wing feathers and curious light blue eyes with very blue rims. It was brought from Venezuela, and its local Spanish name means "the ricebird," but it never specially affected rice as food, preferring fruit and meal worms. I had several of these ciairy affected rice as food, preferring fruit and meal worms. I had several of these crows, but one was particularly tame and rambled about the house seeking for sewing materials. I found it once or twice inside a large workbag full of crewels, where it had gone in search of gay threads with which it used to decorate the wire walls of an empty cage kept in the veranda outside my own sitting room. The exoutside my own sitting room. The extraordinary patience and ingenuity of that bird in passing the wool through the meshes of the wire can hardly be described I suppose it was a reminiscence of nest building, because it always worked nest building, because it always worked harder in the springtime.

It had a great friend in a little "moriche," black and yellow also, but of a more slender build and with a very sweet whistle. The "moriche," too, was perfectly tame and flew all about the house, and it was very comic to watch its efforts at learning embroidery from its friend. It arrived at last at some sort of cage decoration, but quite different from that of the crow, who evidently disapproved of it and often ruthlessly pulled the work of a laborious morning on the "moriche's" part to pieces. Now the "moriche" knew better than to touch the crow's work, though he often appeared to carefully examine it.

he often appeared to carefully examine it.

One day the crow must have persuaded, the "morishe" to help him to roll and drag a reel of coarse white cotton from the corridor of the workroom, across the floor of my sitting room, into the veranda. saw them doing this more than once and had unintentionally interfered with the crow's plans by picking up the reel and re-turning it to the maid's workbasket. However, one afternoon the crow got rido of me entirely, and on my return from a long expedition I found both the crow and "moriche" just going to roost in the empty cage, which was really only kept there for them to play in. I then perceived what the reel of cotton, which was again lying on the veranda floor, had been wanted for.

The crow had sewed a stream armshale.

wanted for

The crow had sewed a straw armchair with an open patterned seast securely to the cage by nine very long strands and was sleepily contemplating the work with great satisfaction. It was quite easy to see how it had, managed, once a start was made with the cetten, but it must have entailed a great deal of flying in and out with the end of, the cotton, for it had not heen broken off. Of course I left the chair in its place, and it remained untouched for some months, but I always had to use it myself lest any one should move it too. it myself lest any one should move it too roughly and, so break the connecting strands which had cost my little bird so much labor and trouble.—Cornhill Maga-

MEXICO'S QUEEREST CITY.

Catorce, So Named Because It Was

Eight miles due east over the moun tains from Catorce station, on the Mexi-can National railroad, is the city of that name, a city along whose steep, winding streets neither wagon nor cart neither stage nor bus, nor any other wheeled vehicle was ever known to puss, although it, has often boasted of a population of 40.-

The city takes its name from once being the stronghold and the property of a band of fourteen of the most daring, desperate, or fourteen of the most daring, desperate, dangerous and successful robbers that, ever laid tribute on roads of Mexico. They discovered and for many years worked the rich deposits, of, silver that abound in this entire section of the country, deposits the value of which, if current report to true for hundreds of years outrivaled. be true, for hundreds of years outrivaled; the mythical riches related of Ophir. the mythical riches related of opinir.

Strange to relate, every piece of machinery, every pound of freight and every passenger to and from Catorce is transported today, as, for centuries, past, either on the backs of men or mules.

Catorce is one of the most interesting places in Moxico. Here are found the cus-soms of Mexico in their purity, unaffected by the influence of the stranger Difficult of access, the town can be reached only by horseback or on foot. Catoree has seldom horseback or on foot. Catorce has seldom-been visited by any except those making business trips. The ride up the mountains into the town is something, once accom-plished, always to be remembered, partly from its element of personal peril, but more because of the beauty of the land-scape encountered at every turn. Glancing down as you near your journey's end, you catch a gleam of the white walls of Los thatorce outlined against the green of the catch a gleam of the white walls of Los Catorce outlined against the green of the mountain side. Thousands of feet below shimmer the waters of a mountain stream. The shifting coloring of the mountains aslight and shade chase each other over their rugged expanse, the browns and greens of the valley below and the hills in the hazy distance are "beautiful exceedingly."

The Real de Catorce is built on the side of a rather pear, the top of the range, and of a ravine near the top of the range, and, has a varying population of from 8,000 to.

40,000, as the mines are paying well or poorly. Here are found all varieties of poorly. Here are found all varieties or silver ore from carbonates to refractory ore assaying $15,000 to the ton. Catoros has a fine cathedral, richly decorated, and has a fine cathedral, richly decorated, and a pretty plaza, the only level spot in the place. To use a railroad phrase, it is a combination of cut and fill, so that to tumble into it on one side and out on the other would be extremely disastrous. The streets are neatly paved and run up and down hill, many of them at an angle of 45 degrees. Altogether this is one of the show places of Mexico.—Modern Mexico.
