GRANT, CLEARY, AND MEREDITH

The Provincial Conservatives can hardly be said to be in a state of very happy agreement with each other at the present time. In his speech at Toronto last night Mr. Meredith once more permitted his temper to get completely the better of him, with the result of more clearly revealing the rifts which are demoralizing and separating his following. His first attack was on Principal Grant, a former Conservative in Provincial politics, and to a certain extent still a supporter of the Conservative party in Dominion politics. It is hardly necessary for the ADVERTISER to defend the head of Queen's University from the peevish attacks of the hard-boset Mr. Meredith. The city solicitor of Toronto is controversially but a pigmy when he comes to measure blades with Principal Grant, and we can safely permit Dr. Grant to deal with him. Than Principal Grant there is no more powerful debater or keener student of public affairs, and when he takes a strong stand in favor of Sir Oliver Mowat's Administration he is able to give the very best of reasons for his conduct.

Mr. Meredith next fell foul of Archbishop Cleary, of Kingston, a brainy but impetuous man, with all the hot Irishman's fire. Archbishop Cleary is also a supporter of Sir John Thompson in Dominion politics, and he was a supporter of the opponents of Sir Oliver Mowat in Ontario until Mr. Meredith took up his anti-Catholic crusade after the withdrawal of the pamphlet on the other tack, entitled "Facts for the Irish Electors," by means of which Mr. Meredith and his friends hoped to oust Sir Oliver.

It is not for us to interfere in this distinctly political family row. The attacks of Mr. Meredith on Principal Grant and on Archbishop Cleary are simply typical of the demoralization which has set into the Conservative party of this Province through the utter failure of its leaders to formulate a policy upon which the administration of Sir Oliver could be fairly attacked. This demoralization of Mr. Meredith's following has rent his party into a dozen fragments, and will land the city solicitor of Toronto, on June 26, in a more hopeless minority in this Province than has yet been his fate.

—Mr. Marter out-herods Herod in opposition to Sir Oliver Mowat. Mr. Marter has made his bed and on it he must lie. It was Mr. Marter's duty of the hour to have cast partisanship to the winds and supported Sir Oliver Mowat in view of the stand of the latter on the question which was supposed to be the pet object of Mr. Marter's idolatry. Mr. Marter bids goodbye to himself permanently. He is a back number.

SHOULD NOT GROW GREAT AT LONDON'S EXPENSE.

The Toronto Star, referring to the progress of that city says:

"Truly this is a great city, bound to become greater."

All right, if it becomes greater by its own exertions. What Londoners object to is its determination, by way of its city solicitor, Mr. Meredith, to obtain five representatives in the Legislature, whereas London would virtually have none. If Toronto desires to have its corporation counsel in the Legislature, it ought at least to provide him with one of the four seats at its disposal.

—A calf with a cough finds no place in a conservative campaign book. It has been with the attack on the apocryphal practical farmer as Ontario agriculture. Will someone give a conservative campaign cry to the calf?

—TER. For Kingston, as Commissioner, Sir Oliver Mowat.

—A successful man of done well to his recognition. He has one of the best of all that has ever been, and he is due to the stability of the party has an excellent team of all

MR OLIVER DID NOT SAY SO.

Our city contemporary insists on dragging Walker-Caring election issues into the present campaign. It seems a trifle irrelevant to do so for three reasons:

1. One of the participants in that contest is now in his grave, and the other sits in the seat in Parliament which was stolen for him by the counting of bogus votes, an outrage which the Free Press defended, and its candidate, the city solicitor of Toronto, condoned.

2. The leading supporters of Col. Walker on that occasion were Conservatives, and are Conservatives to-day. Every time that our contemporary revives that discreditable competition it attacks them, and revives memories that they would rather be left undisturbed.

3. The large majority of us did not have anything to do with the campaigning of twenty years ago, and, whether we are supporters of the London citizen candidate or the Toronto civic official, cannot be held responsible for the doings of those far back days.

It is chiefly to misrepresent Sir Oliver Mowat that the Free Press on the present occasion once more takes up its two-edged sword. Of a speech made by the Premier shortly after the famous campaign in which Col. Walker's friends—it was, the chief justice remarked at the trial, practically a non-party battle—the Free Press now says:

"On a former occasion, he (Sir Oliver) spoke at the City Hall in justification of the use of 'bribe' in elections; he said it was no wrong to practice wholesale corruption in the constituency of London; that it was good 'Reform' principle to 'fight the devil with fire,' which was another form of saying 'anything to beat Carling,' which he then passed into a Grit maxim in this city."

This is a gross libel on the Premier. It entirely misrepresents his teachings. It entirely misrepresents the views of the opponents of the man who sits in Mr. Hyman's seat in Parliament. Below we give the only reference which Sir Oliver Mowat made to "fighting the devil with fire" in his former speech in this city:

"The Liberals gave the country vote by ballot, for which the Reformers in England struggled for half a century to obtain. This afforded protection to the mechanics and laborer, and to every class, from those who could exert undue influence over them. (Applause.) It was a remarkable fact that all the elections yet held under the ballot resulted in favor of the Reformers. (Cheers.) In some cases the same men were returned with larger majorities; in others, Reformers were chosen where Conservatives were elected before. (Cheers.) It also checked bribery. This matter of bribery was one they had heard a good deal about in London lately. Unfortunately there has been too much illegal expenditure. The Tory party for the last twenty years had been spending largely. Numerous constituencies would never have been represented by Conservatives were they not largely populated with those who felt the influence of money. The Conservative party were responsible for all similar expenditures on the part of Reformers, having always used money in election contests, and having repeatedly refused to legislate for the abolition of bribery. Some Reformers, good men, had come to the conclusion that if the Conservatives would buy their way into Parliament, they (the Reformers) must fight them with their own weapons. He (Mr. Mowat) could understand how they entertained this view, but he could not agree with it. He believed in fighting on with righteous weapons and waiting patiently for victory."

Neither the Toronto candidate for the representation of London, nor the Conservatives who aided Col. Walker in his contest, and then returned to their party, will thank the Free Press for misrepresenting and maligning the Premier. It reveals the poverty of the brief at the disposal of the newspaper advocate of Toronto's corporation counsel.

MAJORITIES IN ALL
A contemporary asserts that a majority of the Catholic electors of Ontario will vote for Sir Oliver Mowat. We have no doubt that this is correct. But he will be voted for also by a majority of the Presbyterian electors, and by a majority of the Methodist electors, and by a majority of the Baptist electors, and by a majority of the Congregationalist electors of Ontario. He may not receive a majority of the votes of electors belonging to the Episcopal body; but in that body, also, he is supported by brainy men of standing, of the type of Hon. S. H. Blake, Thomas Moss, Q.C., and many others who might be named.

MR MEREDITH SHIRKING.

Mr. Meredith, on questions relating to temperance, succeeded at his London meeting in pleasing nobody on either side, probably owing to his constitutional bias towards wriggling on every public question. Nobody on either side favors a second plebiscite. Equal dissatisfaction has greeted his proposal to make the selection of license commissioners a bone of bitter yearly municipal contention, the temperance people and the license-holders alternately up one year and down the next, and with no fixity for any person or any principle.

At Mr. Meredith's second meeting, that held in Toronto last night, he shirked the whole question. His endeavor to concentrate attention on the secretariat issue is evidently largely an effort to evade giving a straight answer on the prohibition question. He may yet find himself in the position of the man and his donkey, in which case it will be remembered that he succeeded in pleasing nobody and lost his donkey into the bargain.

A PIONEER'S TRIP.

Veteran Londoner, John Campbell, is Reminiscent.

Entertained on the Eve of Departure for His Native Land.

Afternoon ex-Mayor John Campbell, who he sails for Liverpool, on route for London, where he will visit the home of childhood after an absence of 45 years, personal friends assembled at the house to wish the veteran carriage builder good-bye.

Last night Mr. Campbell was presented upon to meet with a number of intimate associates at a dinner party in the Hotel. It was a most enjoyable reunion. Mr. McMartin provided an excellent meal, the speeches were good, and the evening rarely excelled at the festive board. In attendance were: Mr. Robert Howie (vice-chairman), Ald. J. W. D. Clarke, president of St. Andrew's Society; R. K. Cowan, first vice-president of St. Andrew's Society; T. H. Ferguson, John Purdon, Archibald Sharp, Andrew Templeton, John Fairbairn and Inspector Henderson. A letter was read from ex-Mayor Cowan, in which he said that recent illness prevented his going on hand to wish his old friend a joyous good-bye.

After the usual loyal and patriotic toasts, Chairman Reid proposed the toast of the evening, "A safe voyage and a speedy return to Mr. Campbell." Mr. Reid said he had known Mr. Campbell since he came to the city, 45 years ago, and a better type of manhood was not to be found in London. It was a friendship that had been cemented by common adherence to the great principles that had made Scotland revered at home and respected abroad. He remembered Mr. Campbell's visit to the scenes of his boyhood. He could well imagine the feelings that would well up in him when he beheld the grand scenery of Scotland.

Mr. T. H. Purdon then handed to Mr. Campbell an elegant field glass as a token of the esteem entertained for him by those present, and as an aid to him in his journeyings to and fro in the old land.

Mr. Campbell feelingly replied. He rather thought he would leave so valuable a present in care of his wife. He could hardly trust himself to take it abroad with him. For many years he had longed to see his native land, and now he was happy to be able to gratify his desire. He referred to his boyhood days spent at Tarbert, on the side of Loch Lomond—a most romantic spot—and the patriotic feelings that he always entertained for it. A revolution had taken place since he left his home to come to Canada, 45 years ago. His trip across the Atlantic took six weeks. He came by canal boat to Buffalo, then by steamer to Port Stanley. He landed in the evening, and at once struck through the woods for Elfrid, with nothing but a star to point him the way. His first job was as journeyman blacksmith to a Welshman on the Longwoods road. The poor man had no money to pay wages, and he did not stay long. The following winter he worked at Iona, and obtained for his pay a sugar kettle, a yoke of steers, a heifer, and a lumber wagon. He did not like this kind of thing, and so he made his mind to go back to Scotland. He got as far as Buffalo, but was moved to make one more trial in Canada, so he crossed the lake to Port Dover and walked to Simcoe. He got a job with the Messrs. Austin. John Austin, who was a good master to him, died only three months since. To that worthy man Mr. Campbell said he owed the fact that he was in Canada to-day. In the fall of 1849, he came to London, and engaged with Messrs. Holmes. Here he had since remained, and, he added, "most of you know the rest." He had many warm friends in his pioneer countrymen here, including the worthy chairman, the Messrs. McIntosh, James Dunbar, Mr. Love (father of Frank) and others, and he went to their reward.

Mr. Campbell concluded by thanking them most heartily for the unexpected pleasure of bidding them good-bye in this jovial manner. He assured them that he was none the less a good Canadian because he entertained the highest affection for the land of his birth and its associations.

"Every gentleman present either spoke or sang," he did both. The chairman fairly excelled himself in his favorite melody, and Messrs. McIntosh, Templeton, Sharp, J. W. Jones, and John Ferguson also broke out in the same way. The speeches generally recognized the sterling worth and independence of character always exhibited by Mr. Campbell, who has been three times mayor of the city, and has been president of St. Andrew's Society, and has been in every movement to build up London. Mr. Campbell was also borne to the fact that Mr. Campbell has given to the continent more expert mechanics, able to command the highest positions in their line, than probably any other employer of labor. Shortly before 11 o'clock the enjoyable reunion ended with a unanimous request that, at his leisure, Mr. Campbell would convey, through the medium of the ADVERTISER, his impressions of "Scotland Revisited."

McWherrell's Case.

TORONTO, May 30.—The message to Judge Ferguson requesting him to relieve the prisoner McWherrell embodied a statement that the reprieve until Oct. 1 is merely to give time for full consideration of the case, and that no inference is to be drawn therefrom as to the ultimate decision. "The message" also expressed a desire that this fact should be publicly known.

Who is Liable?

TORONTO, May 30.—In the Court of Queen's Bench an appeal of considerable interest to workmen was argued to-day. It came from St. Thomas. A member named Reiger had his foot burned by the explosion of a mold. He sued the St. Thomas Car Wheel Company, in whose establishment the accident happened, for damages. The trial came off before Justice Meredith in the Railway City, and the company's main defense was a rather peculiar one. They alleged that Reiger was not in their employ, but in the employ of one Kilpatrick, their foreman, whom they alleged was really an independent contractor, and as such engaged the plaintiff. Reiger's counsel contended that Kilpatrick's position as foreman made the company liable, and that they were the proper persons to look to for damages. However, Judge Meredith held that the foreman was really in the position of an independent contractor and non-suited Reiger. The latter has now appealed, and the appeal was argued at great length in the Queen's Bench Division. Judgment was reserved.

"We always fry ours in Cottolene."

Our Meat, Fish, Oysters, Saratoga Chips, Eggs, Doughnuts, Vegetables, etc.

Like most other people, our folks formerly used lard for all such purposes. When it disagreed with any of the family (which it often did) we said it was "too rich." We finally tried and not one of us has had an attack of "richness" since. We further found that, unlike lard, Cottolene had no unpleasant odor when cooking, and lastly Mother's favorite and conservative cooking authority came out and gave it a big recommendation which clinched the matter. So that's why we always fry ours in Cottolene.
