New Stories O. HENRY By

A CONTRIBUTION:
There came unto ye editor
A poet, pale and wan,
And at the table sat him down,
A roll within his hand.

Ye editor accepted it,
And thanked the lucky fates;
Ye poet had yielded it up
To a king full on fight.

IMPOSSIBLE.
"Did you report that suicide as I told you to do last night?" asked the editor of the new reporter, a graduate of a school of journalism. "I saw the corpse, sir, but found it impossible to write a description of the affair."

"Why?"
"How in the world was I to state that the man's neck was cut from ear to ear when he only had one ear?"

HIS ONLY OPPORTUNITY.
Last week, "The Rainmakers" gave two performances in Houston. At the night performance, a prominent local politician occupied one of the front seats, as near to the stage as possible. He carried in his hand a glossy silk hat, and he seemed to be in a state of anxious suspense, fidgeting about in his chair, and holding his hat in both hands straight before him. A friend who occupied a seat directly behind, leaned over and asked the cause of his agitation. "I'll tell you, Bill," said the politician in a confidential whisper, "just now it is. I've been in politics now for ten years, and I've been beaten, and abused and cursed out, and called so many hard names that I thought I'd like to be addressed in a decent manner once more before I die, and this is about the only opportunity I will have. There is a sleight-of-hand performance between two of the acts in this show, and the professor is going to step down to the front and say: 'Will some gentleman kindly loan me a hat?' Then I'm going to stand up and give him mine, and it'll make me feel good for a week. I haven't been called a gentleman in so long. I expect I'll whoop right out loud when he takes the hat. Excuse me now, I've got to be ready and get my hat in first. I see one of the city councilmen over there with an old derby in his hand, and I'll bet he's up to the same game."

The Crossbow a Chinese Invention.
General Chuko Liang, a Chinese who died early in the third century, has been credited with the invention of the self-loading, repeating crossbow, but early records show that these same instruments of warfare are referred to in Chinese annals several centuries B. C. In all probability this efficient weapon is not a Chinese contrivance, but belongs to the culture of the Lolo and Maio-tzu, aboriginal tribes in the southwest and south of China. Their national weapon is still the crossbow, and they have influenced Chinese culture to a certain degree since oldest times.

Amazing Facts Given By Mrs. Ruth Thornton

"Since taking Tanlac I've regained the thirty-five pounds I lost while sick and five pounds besides," declared Mrs. Ruth Thornton, 717 Assumption street, Windsor, Ont.

"At the time I got Tanlac a case of the 'flu' had brought me down to where I was only a shadow of my former self, and so weak I could hardly walk across the floor. My stomach caused me more misery than words can tell. My nerves were so completely unstrung I just dreaded to go to bed, for I couldn't sleep. Even to sweep the floor was a burden to me.

"But Tanlac has made me so well and strong-my housework is like play to me. My appetite is enormous, my food digests perfectly, and I sleep the whole night through and never hear a sound. My friends tell me I am the picture of good health. I never can praise Tanlac enough for the good it has done me."
