A. O. Jeffery Has Thirty Thousand Stamps The Result of a Lifetime's Collecting

Nine Huge Leather - Bound Volumes Contain Many Rare Specimens.

Up a very high step just off the turn in the stairway and into the tiniest and cheeriest of study rooms, and you have found the lair of the philatelist. Of course it is superfluous to mention that the house is a Ridout street house facing direct ly into the setting sun. Or that philatelist means stamp collector, and A. O. Jeffrey is "him," for probably there isn't another man in the disitrict who has such a fine collec-

Mr. Jeffrey is very modest about his hobby. He has seen the collection in the British museum and judges his own collection by too severe standards. London, Ontario, isn't Old London and 30,000 different stamps is a collection which would amaze most amateurs. Mr. Jeffrey refuses to put any valuation on them. refuses to put any valuation on them.

"I just get them," he says, "and then forget all about their money value. But I know this, I wouldn't sell them for anything." However, when it is taken into consideration that one stamp alone, a 12-penny Canadian stamp, is worth $600 dollars, one wonders what a collection of 30,000, including stamps from the state of the state practically every country in the world, would be worth! The valuable 12-penny stamp is missing from Mr. Jeffries' collection, much to his regret, but it is one of the few rare lones which do not appear there.

First Stamps Issued.

Among them are samples of the irst stamps ever issued. Applearing in the year 1840 from the presses of the British government, they are known as the Mulready Envelope. And they really are whole velope. And they really are whole envelopes. The face of the envelope is practically covered with an etching design, sometimes in blue and sometimes in black ink. In the censure seen Britannia sending out her sometimes in black ink. In the center is seen Britannia sending out her winged messengers to all parts of the earth. There are Chinese merchants, elephants from India, North American Indians and others, all

Want to Keep Your Hair Perpetually Curly?

Perpetually wavy or curly hair is now within the means of every woman to possess. One need only get a few ounces of pain liquid slimerine from the druggist and apply a little of it occasionally with a brush before doing up the hair. When this dries the most beautiful natural looking waves and creases imaginable are in evidence. Wind and heat do not affect the curliness as where a heated iron has been used. Liquid slimerine is so pure and harmless there is not the slightest danger of spotting the scalp or streaking the hair, and it leaves no sticky or greasy trace. It keeps the hair soft silky and lustrous.—Advt. b
