KIDNEY-WORT Frem the New York Tribune, Dec. 98. Major Eaton, the president of the Edisor Light company, was asked yesterday what his company thought of the plan proposed by the Brush company to use storage batteries in connection with an arc-light cur-"The public," said Major Eaton, rent. "The public," said Major Eaton, "do not distinguish between different sys-tems of lighting. The Edison system was invented to supplant gas for domestic light-ing, and was made absolutely safe, so as to be free from danger in houses. For that purpose Mr. Edison adopted a lower pres-sure current, and carries it under ground The Brush and other arc-light sys-tems were developed for a different purpose, principally that of street light-ing. They use currents of high pressure and carry them over aerial wires. It is now proposed to introduce these high-pressure currents into houses to feed storage batteries.
