WORLDLINGS.

How sadly the bummer, who once was in clover, Is pushed for a drink, when election is over! From bar-room to bar-room he tramps in sad plight In search of his whisky, or may be a bite. And when on his rounds he shivering goes, With a much paler hue on his face and his nose, How keenly he! watch for a not or a wink; How mimbly he'll step to the bar for a drink! Then pity the bummer, the down-hearted bummer. Who wears in winter the clothing of summer.

Vinegar for the Sick Room. There is a French legend that during the plague in Marseilles a band of robbers plunlered the dying and the dead without injury to themselves. They were imprisoned, tried and condemned to die, but were pardoned on condition of disclosing the saying her prayers. This is what also pardoned on condition of disclosing the secret whereby they could ransack houses infected with the terrible scourge. They gave the following recipe, which makes a delicious and refreshing wash for the sick room; Take of rosemary, wormwood, lavender, rue, sage and mint a large handful of each. Piace in a stone jar and turn over it one gallon of strong, clear vinegar; cover closely and keep near the fire for four day, then strain and add one onnee of camphor gum. Bottle and keep tightly corked. It is very aromatic, cooling and refreshing to the sick room, and of great value to nurses.

timore Dispatch to the Cincinnati Enqu Five years ago among the "young bloods" Baltimore there was numbered a young ge t'enian who, by a happy combination of art and nature, was entitled to a high seat in the arena of life. He was youthful, 23 years of age, handsome in face, and stately and dignified in form. He was the happy pracessor of $100,000, safely invested in registered United States bonds, bequeathed o him by an aged grandmother. The oung man had a very aristocratic and wealthy mother, and she was extremely particular in reference to her sou's choice of domestic partner of life. On a bright frosty morning in the month of Japuary, 1877, the young man entered a fashionable kid glove establishment on Lexington street, this city, for the purpose of purchasing a No. 7 lady's kid glove, which was the size that snugly incased his small and finely formed hand. opened it with a smile of peace, read with a gasp of horror, and then, with one wild shriek of woe, she and the infant simultaneously fell to the floor. The letter, written in almost an illegible hand, and filled with an abundant amount of phonetic spelling, contained the following startling words:—

'Your son's wife is a nigger. He married a nigger. I am her grandmother, and I am what they call a mulatto. You would think she is white, like you white folks, but she ain't. If you don't believe me come and see me. I send my address."

A name, number and the name of a street were at the bittom of this dynamite hand-grenade. Of course when the old lady recovered from her swoon she refused to believe that the note contained the truth. However, when the husband heard of the content, he immediately began a strict investigation, and when the facts in the case became so convincing that the wife could deny no longer, his young and charming brunette treasure, with tears of anguish in her beautiful dark eves, confessed, in her husband's arms, that colored blood did run in her veins.
