THE HORSE RING. The Meet of the Toronto Hunt Club on park. The grounds were densely crowded almost up to the time of closing up. The arrivals of live stock continued all day and throughout the evening and up to yesterday. The horse ring was largely the centre of attraction throughout the day. For the first time since the fair opened the grand stand was filled and the fence all round the ring was lined with spectators. There w s plenty going on all the time. There were the usual acrobatic performances by the Russian athletes, Professor John Theurer, Ouzalo, Mille. Alphonsine and Mons. Forber and Prof. John Wingfield's marvellous jumping dogs. There were also some spirited running races, and an admirable concert by the Massey Manufacturing company's band. In addition to all this there was the meet of the Torontohunt that the price of the scales ($55) was paid, and this there was the meet of the Torontohunt that the price of the scales ($55) was paid, and the price of the scales ($55) wa club, the members of which in their bright scarlet coats contributed not a little to the attractiveness of the scene. Until quite recently what are called fairs or exhibitions were supposed to belong to the daylight only, and the idea of keeping them up after dark had scarcely occurred to any one. But the electric light has changed all that, and now an exhibition, at all events at such a centre of everything as the queen city, can draw crowds by night as well as by day. In fact those who

as the queen city, can draw crowds by night as well as by day. In fact those who have not seen the present exhibition by night have only half seen it. After dark the main building looks like a fairy palace. Electric lights are well diffused over the grounds, and in the various departmental buildings everything can be seen almost as well as by day. The electric light tower is up now, and its blaze of twelve large lights illumines all around. It is well worth while to go or return, or both, by boat, just for the sake of seeing the big light from the water. The effect of the buildings and grounds lighted up, as seen from the water, is very fine. Going by boat, after dark, when passing the waterworks engine house the big electric light is hid from view by the Northern elevator. But in a minute or two more its shines out as a terrestrial star of the first magnitude, throwing all other lights into the shade. As the boat progresses it grows in brightness, and when fairly in front of the main building the view as a whole is a grand one. It is worth while taking the water route at night just to see it. Once landed and within the main building visitors will be further delighted with the Speaking to a very respectable gentleman of high intelligence the other day, he remarked that though we were friendly still that I was obliged to look upon him as one lost, because he was a heretic. That gentleman is very much mistaken. Catholics do not believe that any saint, angel, apostle, mother of God, or all the powers of heaven except the power of Jesus Christ, our holy Redeemer, can save any one. The saints can help us by their prayers. Catholics do not adore images. We do not adore the relies of the saints. We have for them in certain saints. We have for them in certain reverence. The mother finds consolation reverence. The mother finds consolation in going once a week to the closet and kissing the clothes of her departed child. Memorials put us in mind of Christ, and aid us in our devotions. Catholics do not believe that any man or priest or bishop or pope by his own authority or power can forgive sins. Sins are forgiven through the sacrament. It is falsely believed that a person may go to the priest ous idea; God must pardon sin. Catholics do not believe than an indulgence means power to commitsin, or remission of past sins. Indulgence is a commutation of a severe punishment to a less one.

Catholics are by no means obliged to consider all people as lost who die out of their communion. They do not believe that all are protestants who are named so. We consider those protestants who protest against the information and revelation of Christ and their obvious meaning. We claim as catholics all persons whether methodot protestants managers. The number of applications to join the expedition were so numerous that if it had been a fighting force that was wanted 4000 or 5000 men could have been easily obtained.

Amount From the Southeastern Eallband of Adam. We do not believe that the pope is impeccable—that he cannot sin. He can sin like any other child of Adam. We do not believe that the pope is impeccable—that he is infallible, only under certain and restricted conditions.

Catholics are by no means obliged to consider all people as lost who die out of their communion. They do not believe that all are protestants who protest against the information and revelation of Christ and their obvious meaning. We claim as catholics in England did not become catholics because they would gain anything, on the contrary they lost a great deal. No man knows who is lost and who is saved. Now let me say a few words on what Catholics believe, Catholics believe in one God and three persons in God—God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost. The second person became man and died for our salvation and through his blood we are saved. Puring this life time he extellighed a congregation or cor-

time he established a congregation or corporation, and he made twelve apostles the beginning of the corporation, and St. Peter was the head of the church. Christ Peter was the head of the church. Christ ascended into heaven and left powers with His corporation. He said "He that hears you hears me." They were to preach the glad tidings of redemption. Those who believed were to be baptised. Baptism, exterior cleansing of the body, was a symbol of the interior cleansing of the soul.

We believe in what we term "holy orders." The Eternal Father ordained his Son as man and Christ ordained his apostles. Christ instituted anointment for the last hours of life. "If there be any one sick amongst you, call in the priests of accident, near Dundas." one sick amongst you, call in the priests of the church, anoint them with oil." We the church, anoint them with oil." We believe that there is a transitory state after this life. Besides heaven and hell and this earth there is a fourth place called limbo or hades by the holy gospel. Christ's soul went there after death to console others there—those who die not good enough for heaven, not bad enough for hell go there. If there was not this fourth place God would not be just. The child who stole an apple and was drowned you would not send to hell. No, no. There are few who are ready to pass from this

After a part of the church's service had been gone through, the archbishop ascended to the pulpit and in a free and conversational manner began his lecture, taking for his text the following words: "Blessed are ye when men shall revile and speak evil of Christ recorded by St. Matthew, v. ch. iiv. The awful straits to which the in

The circumstances under which the words of the text were uttered, were taken as evidence that when a man is in need or danger his perceptions are greatly quickened, and men should not spurn the wonderful narrative as incredible, simply because they cannot understand it. The presence of the angelic host as recited in the context was cited as evidence that we would be able to see wonderful things, to us now invisible, if endowed with the necessary powers of spiritual vision.

THE SCOTT-ACT CAMPAIGN A LIVELY TIME IN FIVE COUNTIES

Be stopped—What Both Sides Have to

The Scott act campaign is just begin ning to get hot. Before another six week it will be submitted in five counties. The temperance party are even saying that the day will not be long before they will try

On the other side those in the trade say the agitation is ruining their business customers in counties like Simcoe, where the act will soon be submitted. Still further, they have to pay heavy and frequent levies in order to fight the agitators and prevent their business being extinguished "Why should we be compelled to raise money to secure ourselves in a business to legalise which we pay higher license feet to both governments." They also claim that until the matter of jurisdiction in regard to the liquor interest is settled, the agitation ought to be stopped by an act of the dominion parliament suspending the Scott act. "Two governments are fighting to regulate us, while a large portion of the public are anxious to regulate us out of existence. We are getting it all round. A still further complaint from the distillers, brewers and wholesale liquor-dealers is that the tavernkeepers and retail men are not willing to contribute a fair share toward fighting the agitation. These latter (hotelmen and retailers) say they loose enough now by depreciation in the value of their property and loss of business. Some of the insurance companies have raised the rate on hotel property, while others are refusing such risks altogether. When a business gets in a bad way the buildings used in it have a trick, so the insurance men say, of going up in smoke when covered by a fat policy.

Furthermore, the distillers in a way antagonise the brewers in that the former suffer much less from the Scott act than to the latter. Whisky and spirits can be smnggled into prohibited counties in small bulk; in the pocket, under the seat of a wagon, in a bag of feed; a barrel of beer is like a flag on a mast, seen by everybody. As a consequence, stock in breweries is suffering a steady depreciation, by reason of bad debts, Scott act agitation, and the con-the question of compensation. Men like Goldwin Smith contend that any legalized business ought not to be disturbed without him last night.

Whoa Daniel O'Connell, said Mr. Sheehan as he went into the stall and "touched up" the Well there's no use crying over lost chickens, said Mr. Small, I'll go and borrow Peter Ryan's Grey Eagle. But I'd sooner have had Daniel O'Connell.

Of course you would for he's a Clear Grit Thereupon Mr. Small departed.

A FUNEREAL HIPPODROME.

To make a circus go there must be fine weather, and a crowded canvas. Otherwise the motion, the bustle, the spangles and glitter, the jokes of the clown, the music of the glitter, the jokes of the clown, the music of the band, and the solutation of the performers all have a saddening solemn pall, and the peanuts of the candy boy a more than ordinary dyspeptic effect. On Saturday night Forepaugh's great tent was about one-third full, the air was chilly, the audience half-beauted the performance for Islands. hearted, the performance flat. If the trapezist had only fallen in his giddly flight and furnished a corpse nothing would have been wanting for a funeral.

Oh Lord! what next? It puts one in mind of the old story of the Irishman who wrote to his father to come out to America, using the argument that "many a meaner man than you is made a justice of the 'pace' in this country.
