

And hurried up the broad and sounding stair,
 His white face ghastly in the torches' glare.
 From hall to hall he passed with breathless speed ;
 Voices and cries he heard, but did not heed,
 Until at last he reached the banquet-room,
 Blazing with light, and breathing with perfume.

There on the dais sat another king,
 Wearing his robes, his crown, his signet ring,
 King Robert's self in features, form, and height,
 But all transfigured with angelic light !
 It was an Angel ; and his presence there
 With a divine effulgence filled the air,
 An exaltation, piercing the disguise,
 Though none the hidden Angel recognize.

A moment speechless, motionless, amazed,
 The throneless monarch on the Angel gazed,
 Who met his look of anger and surprise
 With the divine compassion of his eyes ;
 Then said, ‘Who art thou ? and why com'st thou
 here ?’

To which King Robert answered, with a sneer,
 ‘I am the King, and come to claim my own
 From an imposter, who usurps my throne !’
 And suddenly, at these audacious words,
 Up sprang the angry guests, and drew their swords ;
 The Angel answered, with unruffled brow,
 ‘Nay, not the King, but the King's Jester, thou
 Henceforth shalt wear the bells and scalloped cape,
 And for thy counsellor shalt lead an ape ;
 Thou shalt obey my servants when they call,
 And wait upon my henchmen in the hall !’
