

CANDOR presents his Compliments to Mr. Almon, and desires he will convey for him the following Letter, a small part of which has been printed already. As Mr. Almon has hitherto published nothing but what is in opposition to the present Ministry, CANDOR thinks it is high time for him to shew some impartiality, by letting the world see what may be said in favour of some of the great men in office ; and for this reason desires he will be the editor of the subsequent pages. Seeing all people agree that the Liberty of the Press should never be violated, and that it does no service, in the long run, to any man that attempts it, every Printer should be totally free, and therefore impartial.
