

it entered confederation has passed laws to establish separate schools, it must always allow these schools to be carried on. Consequently, the Roman Catholics of Ontario and the Protestants of Quebec can never be forced to give up the separate schools which they at present possess. Further, the subjects of agriculture and immigration may be dealt with by both the Dominion and the provinces. But if the Dominion law and the provincial law do not agree in whole or in part, the Dominion law is the one which has force.

What happens if a province enacts a law on a subject with which it has no right to deal? If a person breaks such a law, can he be punished? He can allow the matter to go to trial in a court, and it is there determined whether the province has a right to enact such a law or not. If the province has no such right, the person wins his case and cannot be punished. In very important matters a suit of this kind will be carried from a lower court to a higher, until it is finally decided by the highest court in the Empire, the Privy Council in England.
