(3) the it entered confederation has passed laws to establish separate schools, it must always allow (4) the these schools to be carried on. Consequently, (6) the the Roman Catholics of Ontario and the Pronce, (7) testants of Quebec can never be forced to give tutions, up the separate schools which they at present such as possess. Further, the subjects of agriculture rs, (10) and immigration may be dealt with by both the Dominion and the provinces. But if the Dominion law and the provincial law do not s. and agree in whole or in part, the Dominion law though is the one which has force.

What happens if a province enacts a law on a subject with which it has no right to deal? a person breaks such a law, can he be punished? He can allow the matter to go to trial in a court, and it is there determined whether the province has a right to enact such a law or not. province has no such right, the person wins his case and cannot be punished. In very important matters a suit of this kind will be carried from a lower court to a higher, until it is finally decided by the highest court in the Empire, the Privy Council in England.

public

ines of

outside

by the

genera!

cion of 2) the

y and

ustice

ourts. nt, in

(16)

al or

ed to efore