The Emphasis of New Goods!

Every day brings fresh consignments of new goods that're being opened out fast as received. Merchandise spring has come already and the store is more attractive in consequence. Novelties here now that you don't expect for two months yet, and a constant succession of them upstairs and down. If you've nothing else on hand come and see what the new things look like. Courteous salespeople will gladly show them without any suggestion of buying.

While others are shouting away at old goods we're entertaining you with the newest and best of everything ahead of the season. That's the fact you have to deal with and the gree of enthusiasm in regrad to this discovery is being manifested among be, and without any brand marks." comparison most people are looking for.

A largely attended meeting, presided over by Hon. G. W. Ross, in furtherance of the proposal to hold an Historical Exhibition in Toronto in 1897, the 400th anniversary of Cabot's landing in Canada, was held last night in St. George's Hall.

Those present included Rev. C. J. Boulden and Dean Harris, O. A. Howland, P. F. Ridout, Chancellor Burwash, Prof. Wrong, J. C. Hopkins, Sam. Nordhelmer, etc.

The first resolution approving of the objects of the meeting was proposed by Prof. Wrong, seconded by J. Castell Hopkins.

His Excellency the Governor-General wrote saying he regretted his inability to be present, but that he would be pleased to be the medium of forwarding any petition to the Queen to obtain the presence of a member of the royal family at the exhibition. A vote of thanks to Hon. G. W. Ross for presiding closed the proceedings.

The oath required of an applicant for naturalization is that he "will supplication to defend the country against the Government of Great Britain."

CANADA AND PREFERENTIAL TRADE. Great Britain is prepared to expend almost unlimited sums in the perfection of her army and navy. She is ready to do this in order that the Empire may retain the prestige and supremacy it commands throughout the world. But to retain this supremacy, Great Britain must not only spend enormous sums on her army and navy, but she must be able to obtain her food supplies within her own territory. The Manchester Courier dwells upon the mportance of this latter consideration and refers to her present dependence on foreign nations as one of Great Britain's fatal weaknesses. Great Britain now produces only one-seventh of at consumed by her population. The Courier pertinently asks where England would be if she were left at the mercy of foreign nations for six-sevenths of her supply of the staff of life. It is a "national infatuation," says our contemporary, which blinds the people of England to the danger of such dependence on the goodwill of possible enemies. It is con-tended by the Liberal leaders in Canada that preferential trade between Great Britain and the Dominion is impossible unless this country is prepared to abandon the National Policy and allow British manufactures to come into this country at a low rate of duty. If the question of trade alone were concerned, there is no doubt the esti-mate of the Liberal leaders would be orrect. But we must bear in mind the necessities of the Empire will play in important part in determining its relation to the colonies. If the statesnen of Great Britain have determined that the Empire must become as independent as possible of foreign nations for her food supplies, then they would naturally look to the colonies for suplying those products. While the Dominion of Canada would, no doubt, be prepared to give an advantage to British manufactures as against those of foreign countries, yet we do not consider that such an action on our part if the people of Great Britain are convinced, as we think they are convincsary to sustain its people. In the light of recent developments the admission of British manufactures into ment for her food products in the Eng-

The cry is now raised that Sir Charles Tupper used corruption to secure a ma-jority in Cape Breton. It is a time-test-ed truth that when the Canadian Lib-erals begin to assert that their oppo-nents are bribing, they are doing it to draw attention away from their own crimes. At the time of the last general election the Liberal press fairly bristled with allegations that the Tories were using corrupt means to defeat Liberal candidates. Later, the courts showed that in 29 constitu-encies the Liberals had used corrupt means to defeat Conservative candidates. Very nearly one-third of the whole Liberal representation in Parliament was unseated for bribery.
