SOVIET GOVERNMENT

MONDAY MORNING APRIL 5 1920

Lecturer at People's Forum Gives History of System and Declares People Are Happy.

NOT SUITABLE FOR CANADA

An interesting lecture on "The Con struction and Practical Working of the Soviets of Russia" was given last night before the people's forum by J. MacArthur Connor, who, in the early stage of his address. whilst denying he was a Bolshevik, declared the Russian people had just as much right to soviet form of government—a system hundreds of years old—as the British people had to their particular style of government. Mr. Connor explained that soviet was a kind of village council which ruled for a prescribed district. The village council elected representatives to a town council, who. in turn, selected members for a pro-vincial government. and from that body members were chosen for the national governing body. The soviet was not a creation of the Bolsheviki. It was all very simple, and the Russian people thoroly understood its working. Mr. Connor declared that he did not believe, however, the soviet system would work in Canada.

History of the Duma.

After tracing the establishment of the first duma in Russia, and following the history of that body down to its dissolution, he declared the government party arrested nearly all the Social Democrats and charged them with conspiracy. Seventeen of them, he declared, were given ten years' imprisonment, and ten were de-ported. This attempt to kill civil lib-erty, said Mr. Connor, brought on a general strike in Russia, and the situation was only saved by the outbreak of the war in 1914, when the men returned to the factories to help in its

The abdication of the czar, said Mr. Connor, compelled the workers' and soldiers' associations to come together and form a government so that law and order might be preserved in the country. This new government, said Mr. Connor, informed the United States that they were prepared to go on with the war against Germany if the States and their allies would say

"President Wilson." sald Mr. Connor made a democratic speech on the subject, but refused to send any kind of an answer to the soviet government, who perforce were bound to make peace with the Germans. In-stead of helping Russia, the United States helped to put a band around the country to isolate her. The proper urse would have been to help her to build up a new nation."

Helping Education.

Mr. Connor declared that the present soviet had done more for education in Russia than any other European country had performed for their pean country had performed for their people. No person, declared the speaker, was permitted to live on the work of others, but at the age of 55 years a worker was pensioned by the soviet for the remainder of his life.
