EVERY DAY A GAIN FOR THE RUSSIANS

Cannot Move Rapidly With Only One Line of Railway—Big Wheat Supply a Valuable Asset

New York, March 11.—A London cable to The Herald says: A distinguished Russian has arrived at the Russian embassy on a confidential mission from the Czar's government. When interviewed he expressed himself as more than confident with regard to the war and Russia's share in it. "The reason why we have not done more than we have," he said, "is that while Germany has a wonderful system of strategic railways, we have newly one line from Warsaw to Petrograd. The Germans can throw great masses of men and material from the east to the west and from the north to the south with wonderful rapidity. We cannot do this. The lapse of time is so much in our favor and so strongly to the disadvantage of the enemy, that every week and every day that passes makes Russia stronger, as she is able to put larger armies into the fight. Four times the Germans made mighty efforts to get command of our railway and four times have they failed. "We have another advantage over Germany. We have plenty of wheat for our people. Indeed, there is such an abundance that as soon as the Dardanelles is clear England can have as much wheat as she likes at a cheap rate."

For some time the six-year-old boy, the third boy in the family, has found it his duty to sift the family ashes, as his brothers did before him. One morning the kiddie was told that a baby had arrived, whereat the youngster looked much pleased. "And," continued the father, as he observed the pleased expression of his son's countenance, "it's a nice little girl." The boy's smile vanished instantly. "A girl?" he exclaimed, disgusted. "Must I always sift ashes?" "You have your father's eyes," declared grandpa, looking earnestly at the young girl. "Yes." "And you have your mother's hair." "No, this is sister's hair," faltered the girl. "And she said I could borrow it."

IN PARLIAMENT

Criticism of Some Nova Scotia Postmasters—Hard Blows by J. H. Sinclair—Mr. Copp's Maiden Speech

Ottawa, March 11.—Before the budget debate was resumed in the commons today, George Kyle of Richmond moved the adjournment of the house to discuss certain unsatisfactory conditions of the mail service in Nova Scotia. He said that the present administration had dismissed many qualified postmasters and had substituted untrained men who, in many cases, regarded themselves as the agents of their party and the secretary of the mails was not always sure. Among other instances he told of a letter addressed by himself to W. F. Carroll, M.P., regarding organization work, being delayed for days. B. D. MacKenzie of North Cape Breton supported the charges, saying that some post offices were haunted by political leaders who had access to the mails.

Mr. Carroll corroborated Mr. Kyle's statement about the delay of a letter. Hon. T. Chase Casgrain thanked the member for Richmond for bringing the matter to his attention and asked that detailed charges be laid.

Sir Robert Borden suggested that any irregularities had occurred through mistakes and not through deliberate intent to do wrong.

J. H. Sinclair, of Guysboro, in resuming the debate on the budget, expressed surprise that the government had not yet asked the house to pass the $100,000,000 war vote, of which notice had been given at the beginning of the session. He assured the government that this resolution would receive the unanimous support of the Liberal members of the house.

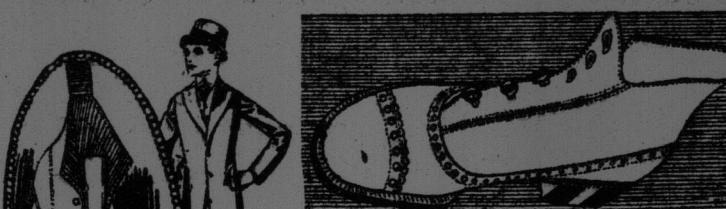

He stated the government for its extravagance, and said that there had never been a time in the history of Canada when there was such a lack of proper supervision of public expenditures as there was today. "It makes a man's blood boil," said Mr. Sinclair, "when so many Canadians are making sacrifices and risking their lives, when 20,000 of our countrymen today are somewhere in the blood-soaked swamps of Flanders, to see grafters, jobbers and patronage-hunters thinking only of what they can steal for themselves, or the reptile fund of their party. The auditor-general is the caretaker of the floor of the chamber."

Mr. Sinclair declared that the late government had lived within its income. If the present government cannot, they should step aside and make way for a new administration. One cause of the increased expenditure, he said, was the great increase in the civil service. Ten thousand new officials had been appointed. There had been other recklessness in making places for party friends.

A. B. Copp, the new member for Westmorland, who made his maiden speech in the house at a later hour, declared that he did not come into the house with his tongue bridle because of any party trick when it was a case of offering fair criticism in the interests of the country. He charged that the government had brought the dominion to a state of chaos, so far as the finances of the country were concerned.

The opposition did not want to stop all public works, but they believed that if the government had his choice between more taxation and retrenchment, he would certainly choose the latter. He believed the government was embarrassed by criticism from the opposition, but the people of Canada would be embarrassed the opposition failed to do its duty. They were perfectly justified in pointing out, for instance, the scandal and crime of sending soldiers to the trenches with insufficient equipment and bad boots. The whole country, he declared, was seething with suspicion in regard to the war contracts.

It mattered little whether the opposition criticized the government or not, so far as determining the date of the

The government would go to the country, in any case, when they thought the chances were best.

Mr. Copp strongly criticized the imposition of a duty on fertilizers, and declared that some of the strongest supporters of the government in his province had registered their protests against it. Counting the increased duties on the ingredients, which entered into the composition of fertilizers, he declared that the duty now imposed would mean a taxation in the coming year of $130,000 on this item alone. The increased duty on farming machinery would mean over $700,000, and the duty on seeds over $18,000, making a total of about $880,000 to be collected from the farmers in additional taxation on these three items alone. The government's campaign of patriotism and production, he asserted, was principally a campaign for greater patriotism for the Conservative party, and of greater production of Conservative votes.

The increased duty which New Brunswick alone would have to pay, on the basis of last year's importations, would be $1,078,000. His own county of Westmorland would be called upon to pay $186,000 more; the county of Charlotte, $64,700 more; Kent, $74,500 more; Kings, $82,700 more, and York county, $86,000 more.

In conclusion, he strongly criticized the minister of railways for taking of the Ocean Limited on the I. C. R., for the increase of freight rates, and for increased cost of management, without a more efficient service.

In her language, Nancy Allison was inclined to be what her brother called "gushing." One summer she took an automobile trip through New England. On her return she was giving an enthusiastic description of one fine old inn to her family.

"It was perfectly charming. Such wonderful old doorways, and the quaint old inn!" She paused searching for a word. "It was—unique."

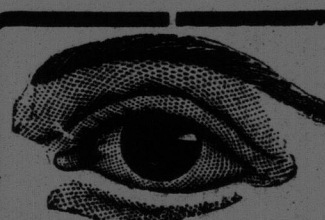

Brother Ned had been listening gravely to her family. "That's a fine word. Let's see. 'Unique,' one 'Qu,' home. 'One-home' town. Good!" and without waiting for anyone to criticize his interpretation of the word, he promptly took his departure.

Oh yes, he's a high stepper all right—he's just bought one of our Twenty Dollar Suits at the Opening of Spring Style—you have the same opportunity. "Step lively, please."
