Judge McKeown Says Rules of Court Should Be Revised—Twenty-Four Below in Capital (Special to Times) Fredericton, Jan. 20—Judge McKeown presided at the adjourned sitting of the divorce court this morning. By Mrs. May and McGee, His Honor gave judgment dismissing the case for want of sufficient evidence. Clara Blizard and W. H. Blizard, Fredericton case, a decree was granted to the wife. The husband is now living in St. John. In Fenwick and Fenwick, a Kings county case, there was an argument in regard to alimony claimed by the plaintiff. Mr. G. W. Fowler, M. In regard to alimony he thought a change should be made to permit of the question being argued before the registrar of the court. The mercury here last night dropped to twenty-four below zero. Dr. King Hazen of St. John is here today having been summoned by the plaintiff to contradict statements made by Messrs. The Australian Steamer Halington, Captain J. S. Rogers

After a nineteen day trip across the Atlantic, and during the greater part of her voyage being compelled to battle against westerly and southwesterly gales, the Australian steamer Halington arrived in port this morning from Newport, England, to complete cargo for Australia. The Halington, under the command of Captain John S. Rogers, left Newport on Jan. 1st. For the first five days the ship, splitting the tarpaulin on the after hatch, smashing in the door of the poop and flooding it with water.

After crossing the Gulf Stream on his way north, Captain Rogers says the ship, splitting the tarpaulin on the after hatch, smashing in the door of the poop and flooding it with water.

Neither the hatches nor any other part of the ship were damaged. The weather conditions were very unfavorable.

"I have not had much experience with bell buoys," said the captain. "I don't think they are of much use as they don't seem to give satisfaction in fine weather."

Captain Howson said that he expected to see the Forchu buoy off Yarmouth between the squalls. Six degrees lower had been allowed to slip. "Had I known the Lurcher was not in her position," said the captain, "I would have gone on the outside. I did not ask Capt. Sobie whether the Lurcher was in position but took it for granted she was at her station." Captain Howson said that in changing his course he thought it would be possible to see the Forchu lights.

ERROR BY CAPTAIN

Out of the buildings Reed, Kontz and Lone made their way on a trot to the gate. None of the guards dared shoot because of the possibility of a riot. A shot was finally fired and it hit Miss Foster in the leg.

Beaching the gate the three men dropped their legs, unlocked the gate, and sprang into a buggy. Lashing the horses, the convicts sped down the road. The dash for liberty was short, however, for guards on horses quickly came within shooting distance and a running fight began. The convicts made a desperate fight as the buggy lurched along, but it was soon over. Bullet after bullet from the guns of the guards found its mark, and the convicts fell one by one from a shot, and the guards came to the three convicts lay dead in the buggy. Order was soon restored in the prison.

THIEVES IN THE NORTH END

In Gray's shoe store, in Main street, recently, several pairs of rubbers and boots were stolen. The thieves may possibly be the same who broke into the liquor store of John Sullivan in Simmonds street a few nights ago and helped themselves.

In Gray's store they did not succeed in making an entrance sufficient to allow of their getting inside, but by breaking through a window at the rear forced their arms through some iron bars and almost emptied a case of rubbers besides taking several pairs of boots. They left only two pairs of rubbers in the case.

SEVEN KILLED IN GUN BATTLE IN PRISON OUTBREAK

(Continued from page 1) through a basement store room and up the dark stairway to the entry room of the main building. There stood John Martin, the turkey, but before he realized what the presence of the men meant, a shot passed through his cheek knocking him down. The men took his keys. With a shout to the other prisoners to join them, the three rushed forward. Oates, the assistant warden, was in their path. Reed shot him through the heart. Near the door of the warden's office sat Judge Thomas, who was waiting to see Warden Dickson.

"Boys, I'm an innocent by-stander, just here on private business," the judge called as he sprang his feet and put up his hands. In reply came a shot from the convicts and he fell dead. Another shot wounded Wood, a guard, and Miss Foster, the telephone operator, then came in for attention from the three. With an oath they overturned the switchboard, hoping to disconnect the wires.

By this time the convicts were shouting cheering words to the escaping men and guards were shooting as they ran about.

"Phone Girl at Shield. Half crying as the rifles of the guards cracked from various quarters, the three convicts hesitated, but only for an instant. Lured by the hope of freedom, they went toward the gate, dragging Miss Foster with them. As they neared the gate, they lifted the telephone operator and carried her as a shield. The three huddled behind her as they rushed from the building.

Gedfrey, one of the guards, attempted to halt them. He was shot to death. A bullet that went wild passed through the office door of Drover, the berthing expert, and killed the official.

Out of the buildings Reed, Kontz and Lone made their way on a trot to the gate. None of the guards dared shoot because of the possibility of a riot. A shot was finally fired and it hit Miss Foster in the leg.
