

FRANK McCULLOUGH WILL GO TO THE SCAFFOLD FRIDAY MORNING

Murderer of Detective Williams Must Pay the Death Penalty as No Commutation of Sentence is to be Given by Ottawa—Sensational Murder Case Nears a Climax.

Toronto, June 11.—Frank McCullough, murderer of Acting Detective Williams, will be hanged at eight o'clock on Friday morning at Toronto Jail, unless a decision reached by the Department of Justice at Ottawa on Saturday afternoon, is reversed. Hope for this course is still held by Mr. T. C. Robinette, K. C., counsel for the condemned man, who has made one of the most brilliant fights of his long career as a successful criminal lawyer, to save his client from the gallows.

Mr. Robinette has asked that a full statement of the evidence taken before Judge Rose, who sentenced McCullough to the gallows, be forwarded to the Minister of Justice. No official word has been received from the Department of Justice by Sheriff Mowat today and he is making his arrangements for the execution on Friday.

"I received a wire this morning from Ottawa telling me of the decision on the McCullough case," said Mr. Robinette to The Times today. "I understand the majority of the committee voted against commutation. I have done all in my power to save McCullough and still hope for a last-hour reprieve."

When McCullough goes to his death on Friday he will not take with him the sympathy which his case attracted prior to his own escape, and later the escape of his paramour, Miss Vera de Lavelle, who was awaiting sentence for helping her lover out of jail. Many have become convinced that the Lavelle-McCullough gang have proven themselves unworthy of further sympathy.

Some are looking forward to the publication of the news of the decision at Ottawa to bring Vera de Lavelle from her hiding place for a last gaze at the man she has loved.

Since the arrest of McCullough on the night of November 19, a few moments after he had fired four fatal shots into the body of Acting Detective Williams in Cross' livery stable, King street west, the case has been followed with great interest.

On the evening of the murder Detective Williams arrived at the livery office and informed Cross that he was waiting for McCullough and one Johnston, who were then out with a buggy on a pillaging expedition. In the scuffle which followed the arrival of the two thieves Johnston got away, and Williams, who had risen to the rank of acting detective in his twenty-fourth year, was shot four times in a desperate struggle in which he tried to subdue the criminal.

As the dying man sank to the ground calling for a doctor, Cross seized McCullough, who broke away, only to be caught a moment later by a squad of police.

McCullough was first sentenced to be hanged on January 23. The day set for the execution was May 2. He told detectives and newspapermen that he would cheat the gallows and departed quite confident for the jail.

His Sensational Escape. On the night of April 7, McCullough made good his escape, when he sawed the door of the condemned cell window and won his freedom. His guinea, Frank Currell, who is now awaiting sentence for having aided his criminal charge to get away, slept a drugged sleep while the murderer of Williams made his way to liberty. Outside the jail he is supposed to have met the Lavelle woman and to have gone with her to the home of Mrs. Kinella, of Bathurst street, who accepted McCullough and the woman as lodgers.

MOSCOW PAYS THIRTY RUBLES A POUND FOR ITS HORSE MEAT

American Reaching Omsk from Russia Tells of Horrors of Life Under Bolsheviki—Illness and Starvation on Every Hand—Short Crops This Year.

Omsk, April 11. (Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—Horse meat at 30 rubles a pound, dog, at 12; rye flour, 800 rubles a pound (thirty-six cents); potatoes, 210 rubles a pound. These were prices prevailing in Moscow last February, according to an American, Dillon, representing a large machinery establishment, who has just arrived here. Dillon left Moscow on February 9 and came through Penza, Saratov, Ural'sk, Orenburg, Samara and Ufa, arriving in Omsk after many difficulties, on April 5.

Moscow is half deserted, he said. All signboards of erstwhile prosperous business houses are down since all such places have been "nationalized." To ride one verst (two-thirds of a mile) by cab costs 100 rubles. A box of matches, if obtainable at all, costs 15 rubles. (A ruble was normally 50 cents.) People were burning furniture to heat their rooms, due to the shortage of firewood. Drunkenness was prohibited under penalty of death.

There is an endless Bolshevik propaganda. Pamphlets and newspapers enjoining upon the benefits of Bolshevism flood the towns and cities and proselytizing is carried on feverishly among returning Russian prisoners from Germany. Strikes in other countries are halted with delight, and a world-wide revolution is represented as being in progress.

There are many Chinese and Mongol troops in Moscow, according to Dillon. The city is full of unemployed workmen. There are 75,000 idle mill workers alone and a greater number of idle textile workers.
