

PERTINENT QUERIES FOR THE FLEMING GOVERNMENT

Fredericton, March 7.—The following notices of inquiry were presented to the legislature yesterday by Messrs. Dugal and Pelletier:
1. What public works have been undertaken by the Foundation Company, Ltd., in the province of New Brunswick?
2. What is the total amount of money that has been paid to this company up to the present time?
3. Who is the manager of the company, and do any of these reside in the province?
4. Is the government aware if any members of the legislature or officials of the government are interested in this company?
5. Is the Foundation Co., Ltd., incorporated in the province or has it paid the usual license to do business here?
6. Is the Concrete Construction Co., Ltd., incorporated in New Brunswick? If not has it paid the usual license fee to do business?
7. How much money has the government paid this company to date for painting and cleaning steel bridges?
8. What bridges have been cleaned and painted? What is the length of each bridge? What was the cost of the work upon each?
9. Was the work done by tender and contract or by order?
10. If by tender, who were the tenderers and what was the amount of each tender?

23. Has the work of mixing concrete proceeded during the year 1913 of 848, a total of $839. Could there be anything more disgusting in the position of a public man? Has the government not been exceeding forbearing and very lenient? It is because of this evidence of Mr. Pinder's gross abuse of trust, of his determination to trade in public affairs for his own personal aggrandizement, of his lack of honor and lack of appreciation of the responsibility of a public man with public business, that he has not been—and cannot be—taken into the executive. Mr. Pinder may win and profit, but he must also face the fact, that no leader of a government can afford to take into his cabinet a man with such a reputation as Mr. Pinder unfortunately has.

CHARGES GRAFT ON TRENT CANAL
Mr. Ferguson charges furthermore that McClellan not only practised deception and dishonesty himself but winked at it in other and that he has proven himself hopelessly incompetent for the position he holds. Going into detail in regard to the auditing of accounts, Mr. Ferguson said that payments were made to bankers, lawyers, doctors, dentists, undertakers, barbers and almost every class of business or profession for work done either for government or private benefit and that these names appeared on the pay sheets as "labourers."
In most of the instances Mr. Ferguson stated that the money was largely justifiable as being properly chargeable to work in connection with the construction of the canal but there are a few instances where, he says, the least, there was very great generosity shown in dealing with the public funds.
Dealing with alleged contributions of money, which should have properly been sent to Ottawa, to the Liberal election fund, Mr. Ferguson says:
"In the summer of 1910 McClellan sent a draft for $1,000 to work for John Ritchie & Co. for which they paid to McClellan $300. This money was never paid to the government and McClellan is charged to account for it. His statement is that he may have drawn the cash for it and left it with Clara, the accountant, to hand over to one Davidson for the Liberal campaign fund. He admits that large sums of money should have been remitted to Ottawa, were contributed to the Liberal election fund. In a short investigation in the hospitally made accounts I was able to trace about $2,000 which he

ASQUITH'S CONCESSIONS TO ANTI-HOME RULERS
The evidence given by Mr. McClellan himself in this connection which is apparently the only thing on which Mr. Ferguson bases his charge, shows that the latter declared, "I suppose it went into the election fund," when asked as to what disposition had been made by Clara of the money.
Mr. McClellan also swore that in the nine years he had been connected with the canal the total amount of money which might have gone into the election fund was $1,800 or possibly $2,000. He said that Hon. J. R. Stratton had never asked him directly for any money, the latter of his own accord had taken $1,000 from the canal office for the election fund, which was merely, according to Mr. McClellan, an "understanding." He does not say that he had taken it upon himself to direct intimation to him and he says in the evidence, "No one officially at Ottawa ever talked to me about anything that way, no minister ever spoke to me of it." As to the empty camera sack, Mr. McClellan says that the money received for these had never been considered as belonging to the government, but he had taken it upon himself to require the workmen to gather them up and had then sold them.
The second point was that the whole of Ireland should in the first instance be included, both for legislative and executive purposes in the bill as it stood, but that option should be given, after the lapse of a certain time, to the Ulster counties, to remove themselves from the jurisdiction of the Irish legislature and executive and revert to their present position. That was a proposal that had been considered before by the high authority of Sir Horace Plunkett.
There, again, was a proposal which had the great merit of starting from the beginning with a full recognition of the Irish legislature. A practical working parliament for all Ireland would in very few years show whether the apprehensions of Ulster were well founded. If they were not, things would go on as they were. If they were well founded the minority had a constitutional door of escape. It would also be an excellent plan if he could make it acceptable, but he was afraid he could not.
Both these roads being blocked they proceeded to explore a third, way which was popularly by the name of "exclusion." The objections to exclusion were that starting with an Irish legislature not fully representative was running the risk of stereotyping traditions inherited from the past which all hoped and many believed the future would soften and time obliterate. Nobody was more alive than he to the force of these objections.
The Unionists, of course, could get rid of the difficulties of exclusion by a simple denial of home rule, and the home rulers could get rid of them, if they were ready to start home rule in an atmosphere of discord and tumult. But it seemed to him that Unionists and the home rulers alike could find in some form of provisional exclusion a via media to the surrender of principle and the application of force. Exclusion could only be put forward not as a solution but as an expedient which might pave the way in time to a final settlement.
They then came to the practical question as to how far exclusion could be adopted without violating the principles of either side. Mr. McClellan had come to the conclusion that the only practical way was to allow the Ulster counties themselves to determine whether they desired to be excluded. His plan was that any county in the province of Ulster was to be excluded for a certain period if on a poll being taken by the parliamentary electors of any county before the bill came into operation a bare majority of voters favored exclusion. Said poll would be taken in the county if a requisition were presented signed by one-tenth of the electors and presented within a certain time after the date of the passing of the bill. The persons entitled to vote were those entitled to vote at parliamentary elections, and the question would not be whether they were the electors of the county from the government of Ireland for a period of years, or are you against such exclusion? The poll would be taken by ballot similarly to parliamentary elections. If the poll resulted in favor of exclusion, the county would be automatically excluded for a prescribed period.

In speaking of a "county" he would include as separate counties the boroughs of Belfast and Londonderry. He did not believe they could select a more practicable area than a county. The government, after much consideration, thought the period of exclusion should be six years after the first meeting of the Irish legislature in Dublin.
Sir Edward Carson—"What happens at the end of six years?"
In reply to a question by the government had taken six years to insure that before the period of exclusion came to an end there should be ample time for by experience the actual working of the Irish legislature. They were sure also that before the period of exclusion ended there should be a certain opportunity for a referendum on the question of Ireland to pronounce whether or not exclusion should come to an end. (Cheers.)
Mr. Asquith showed by examples that there must be two general elections before the period of exclusion expired. The government believed that was a fair and equitable arrangement. (Cheers.)
In reply to a question by Bonar Law, Premier Asquith said the counties should come in after six years unless the imperial parliament otherwise determined. He emphasized that the excluded areas during these six years would continue their representation in the house of commons exactly as now, and they should continue as far as possible the administrative machinery which was now in the Irish executive would have no right of entry in the excluded area.
