Tom Timer's watch had no hands

My eight year old daughter and I have a great thing going. We like to make up stories together. Like this one . . .

Once upon a time there was an old man named Thomas Timer. He fixed watches.

But after a number of years Tom Timer got tired of everyone coming into his store and saying, "My watch is three minutes fast." Or "My watch is too slow — three minutes too slow." Or "My watch has stopped."

Then one day he decided to make a watch himself. But this watch would be different. He made the movement with all the wheels. He made a case and a watch band to keep the watch on a person's wrist. He made a face and a glass to cover it.

He made the watch to work like any other watch. And he made the watch to look like any other watch. Except for one thing. He made the watch with no hands. No second hand. No minute hand. And no hour hand.

When Tom Timer finished making his watch, he placed it in the window of his shop. He shone a bright light on it so it stood out above all the other watches in the window. He wanted to attract people's attention to the watch.

The first man who passed by saw the watch and came into Tom Timer's store. "I like your watch in the window," the man said, "But . . . what about the hands?"

"The hands?" said Mr. Timer, "Oh, you don't need hands.

Amen

Karl Shuessler

If you had hands, you'd know when you were late for an appointment. So you'd worry and feel badly."

"Yes, but . . ." the man interrupted.

"Besides," Tom Timer went on, "If you didn't have hands to tell you what time it is, you wouldn't become a slave to your watch."

"Yes, but . . ."

"And what's more, if 9 o'clock or 12 o'clock or 3 o'clock is your favourite time of the day, then your watch with no hands would never tell you differently. It would always be the time you think it is."

"Yes, but . . ."

"And best of all, your watch would never run three minutes too slow or three minutes too fast. And if it stopped, you'd never know the difference. So you'd never have to bring it to the watchmaker to get it fixed."

"How much does it cost?" the man asked.

"Only $9.99. Isn't that reasonable? For such an unusual watch? A watch with such a difference?"

"Yes, yes, it is. I'll take four of them. One for my wife, one for my two children and one for myself. Oh, yes. I think I'll get one for my boss. Then he won't know what time I come to work."

And both the man and the watchmaker lived happily ever after.

When we read our story to the family, they hooted us. "Sort of ridiculous, eh?"

"What a con artist, that Tom Timer."

"I bet that guy's life was a mess with that watch! How can the world operate without time schedules? It would be chaos. Sheer chaos."

"Pay money for a watch that didn't serve its purpose?"

"Fantasy land."

All scoffers they — that family of ours. But this didn't bother Sarah and me. People with unusual ideas are usually laughed at. We all know that romantics suffer. Visionaries see way ahead of their time. But most of all Sarah and I had fun. We laughed a lot when we made up the story together.

And now the rest of the family thinks they have the laugh on us. For underneath the Christmas tree they put a present for me. A bathroom scale. And inside the box they wrote a note:

"Once upon a time there was man named Tom Scaler. He got tired of a man who came to him and always complained, "There must be something wrong with my scales. I can't weigh this much! This scale must weigh heavy. Would you check it out for me? Just one more time? Please?"

"Me? 190 Pounds? Unbelievable! Those stupid scales. They're dead wrong."

So Tom Scaler had an idea. He made the man a new scale. One that looked like every other scale. Only across the glass where the numbers were, he glued on black tape. So the man could weigh what he wanted to. The perfect weight. The weight he always tried to get down to."

I love my new scale. My Christmas present. My scale with the black tape across it.

And I do believe. I will live happily ever after. My weight's perfect now.

Valerie Wright weds Michael J. Chapman

Valerie Gillian Wright, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reg Wright, Derry Road, recently became the bride of Michael John Chapman son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Chapman, Surburban drive. Rev. Adams officiated at the afternoon ceremony, held at Trinity Anglican Church, Streetsville. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length white polyester satin gown, with a lace trimmed bodice, and sheer lace sleeves with frilled cuffs. Her lace headdress was trimmed with pearls, and the sheer three-tiered veil was edged with lace. She carried a bouquet of yellow roses, carnations and daisies. Jane Sanjana, matron of honour, wore a floor length gold nylon floral gown, with an orange picture hat, and carried a bouquet of pale yellow carnations, butterscotch daisies and purple statice. Bridesmaids, Julie Rathcliffe and Joan Green, wore floor length gold nylon floral gowns, with pale yellow picture hats.
