

or according to the document "illegal" addresses for communication with Communist parties in the United States of America, Mexico, South America, Canada, Australia and New Zealand and South Africa.

Other documents were found on the premises but it is unnecessary to describe these as the documents already referred to sufficiently prove the existence, under the direct control of Soviet authorities, of a regular system whereby documents of a subversive character from various organizations in Russia were conveyed secretly to various persons engaged in communist activities in this country and elsewhere.

In conclusion it may be pointed out that the evidence now in the hands of the authorities prove (i) both military espionage and subversive activities throughout the British Empire, North and South America, were directed and carried out from 49 Moorgate (ii) no ostensible differentiation of rooms or duties was observed as between members of the Trade Delegation and the employees of Arcos, and both these organizations have been involved in anti-British espionage and propaganda. Ends. Telegram ends.
