who, in the recent battle of the Marston, not only fought with most conspicuous bravery, but called for a special message from their Field Marshal, who sacrificed and gave their lives for their own honour and that of their native home and Empire.

Their grief for them is great, they fully realize that our pride in them is greater than even more justly.

GERMAN ATTACKS BEATEN OFF.
LONDON, July 12. Germans, heavily reinforced, delivered strong attacks against the British on the Somme front last night. They gained ground in Mametz and Trones Wood. An official announcement issued here this afternoon says that all German attacks were beaten off except in Mametz and Trones Woods.

LOST GROUND RE-CAPTURED.
LONDON, July 12. The day was marked by sharp local fighting in certain areas. In Mametz Wood we recaptured all the ground lost last night, and now holds the whole wood. We also made some progress in Trones Wood. The very large number of German dead in this vicinity shows the costliness of their attack last night. Two heavy German attacks against Contalmaison, completely broke down under our fire.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.
PARIS, July 12. The Germans delivered two attacks last night on a French position in the neighborhood of Deadman's Hill on the Verdun front. A War Office announcement of to-day says that both these assaults failed, breaking down under the French fire. West of the Meuse the French retook part of the ground won yesterday by the Germans in operations east of the Meuse the French took 80 prisoners, of whom one is an officer. There were no developments last night on the Somme front. The French continued successful raids in Champagne and in Lorraine.

"INFERIOR IN STRENGTH."
NEW YORK, July 12. For the first time since the Crown Prince initiated his siege strategy last February, German striking power is less at Verdun than elsewhere on their front in France, according to the correspondent of the World at Paris. "Their latest blow on the right bank of the Meuse early yesterday morning was inferior in strength, ac-the United States Government may make. If the Deutschland is destroyed by a British warship, the State Department will make no inquiries. These facts were made plain at the British Embassy and at the State Department to-day.

ANNUAL PROCESSION CANCELLED

BELFAST, July 12. On account of the war and of their desire to assist the authorities to carry out the regulations established by martial law, the Orangemen omitted to-day their annual procession in celebration of the Battle of the Boyne. By way of showing respect for those of the Ulster division who have fallen at the front, all business was suspended at noon for five minutes. Street traffic was at a standstill and all blinds were drawn.

IN THE LORDS.

LONDON, July 12. The campaign carried on in a section of the press some time ago against Viscount Haldane, because of his alleged pro-German leanings before the war, broke out again in the Lords to-day. When Haldane arose to speak on national education, the Duke of Buccleuch interposed with reference to assertions published before the Viscount resigned as Lord High Chancellor, to the effect that after return from his visit to Berlin in 1912 he made speeches, which stated that Germany felt no hostility towards Britain. "I want the noble lord first to explain his past conduct in deceiving Britain as to the German danger," said the Duke of Buccleuch. Viscount Haldane replied: "No man desired more than himself that the whole facts as to what had been done before the war should be brought out." He said there had been an extraordinary amount of misapprehension, untruth and inaccuracy, and that the sooner the truth was brought to light the better.

REDMOND ON IRELAND.

LONDON, July 12. John Redmond, leader of the Irish Nationalists, to-day issued a statement characterizing the speech of the Marquis of Lansdowne in the Lords on Tuesday, as a declaration of war on the Irish people. He says also that the speech was a breach of faith, apparently made with the intention of wrecking negotiations for compromise. "I regard Lord Lansdowne's speech as a gross insult to Ireland," says Redmond in his statement. "It amounts to a declaration of war on the Irish people, and is the announcement of a policy of contraction. If this speech be taken as representing the attitude and spirit of the Government towards Ireland, there is an end to all hopes of settlement. The speech seems to me to have been made with the deliberate object of wrecking negotiations for a settlement." As deserving of special notice, Redmond cites the following passage from Lord Lansdowne's speech: "It is a bill which will make structural alterations in the Act of 1914, already on the Statute Book, and therefore of a permanent and enduring character. But it is an Act which will contain other points, temporary provisions such as, for example, those dealing with the Commons, which it is proposed to set up in the near future." Redmond proceeds: "This would be a gross breach of faith. I desire to state that I adhere strictly to the terms which were submitted to us by Lloyd George, which were then submitted to us by the Nationalists. Any departure in the direction indicated by Lansdowne's suggestion would, so far as we are concerned, bring negotiations absolutely to an end. The agreement arrived at was that the Home Rule Act of 1914 was to be put into operation as soon as possible, subject to certain modifications, which were all to have been on the same footing. These other modifications are to remain in force and for a period of twelve months thereafter. But if Parliament has not before the termination of that period made further permanent provisions for the Government of Ireland, the period for which those modifications are to remain in force shall be extended by Order in Council, for such term as may be necessary in order to enable Parliament to make such provision. A bill to carry out the agreement came to must and will, of course be, in all its provisions and details, strictly temporary and provisional." In his speech before the Lords on Tuesday, Lord Lansdowne outlined the system for a provisional government of Ireland, when martial law was abolished there, until the new government can be established. Among other suggestions made by Lord Lansdowne was the maintenance of a garrison in Ireland, strong enough to preserve order. He thought 40,000, under command of General Maxwell, would be sufficient to prevent the situation from getting out of hand.

THE ARABIAN REVOLT.

LONDON, July 12. Revolt against Turkish rule in Arabia is spreading, says a Reuter despatch from Cairo. It is stated that the Grand Sheriff of Mecca, leader of the rebels has ample supply of men, guns, and ammunition. Arabian troops under Said Indriss have captured the town and fort of Kufufada. The garrison of eight Turkish officers and 190 men were made prisoners. Indriss' flag now flies over Kufufada garrison. Tait is still holding out. An attempt at sortie was repulsed with heavy losses by the Arabs who captured two guns. The chiefs of the beleagured fort will hold out until the garrison surrenders. It is understood that the Arabs from Medina to the outskirts of Dappassuc are supporting the Grand Sheriff Emir, Nuri Shalam, and have thrown their support to him. Emir Shalam some time ago received many presents from the Turkish Government, but he refused to join an attack on the Suez Canal. The Arabian newspaper Mokattana, the despatch says, declares that Constantinople is greatly alarmed over the revolution. The newspaper says that a large expedition has been ordered into the Vilayet of Hedjaz, but that destruction of the railway prevents the sending of any great amount of troops and munitions.
