"And what did he do with it?"

"Spent it upon some other woman in London—most of it. I found him out; he gave her thousands of pounds at once."

"Well, I should not have though that of him," said he, with a laugh.

She paused a moment and covered her face with her hand, and then went on: "If you only knew, Edward; if you had the faintest idea of what my life was until a a year and a half ago, when I first saw you, you would pity me and understand why I am bad, and passionate, and jealous, and everything that I ought not to be.
