Chicago, Jan. 25,—The four-story residence of Charles J. Barnes, 2,237 Calumet avenue, was destroyed by fire at 2 o'clock this morning. With the mercury 19 degrees below zero, all were forced to flee in scant attire to save their lives. A maid servant named Kitty, was overcome by smoke and carried out by the firemen. My learned friend says: "I purge my-self by showing Morris Dillon was playing cards! I purge myself because Mr. Toothe was not there after 7:30. I purge myself because I put Mr. Nash, and Mr. Gray in the box." We are not here saying that Mr. Toothe, or Mr. Dillon, or Mr. Nash, or Mr. Gray stood at the doors and let up some men and hindered others from going down. We are here saying that the men they put in charge of the doors are not called. These men were put in for a special agency connected with these voters, according to Mr. Toothe's testimony. What did they do? What they did, those who put them in charge are responsible for. The fact remains that them

The fact remains that by reason of what took place that night, Johnston did not get in his own vote. Your lordships must have seen the comedy with regard to those doorkeepers. While one witness was being put into the box, enother witness was sent out to look for him. He returned, and said the man would be back in a minute. My learned friends, acting for Mr. Beattie, waited just sixty seconds and then closed their case! They dared not put these men into the box. They knew that these men must confirm the story of those who were imprisoned in the attic. Then from the mouth of one of the witnesses for the defense comes a cogent bit of testimony. Angry at the treatment his brother had, he sees Dillon in the morning, and speaks sharply to him. They have words about it. Johnston says that his brother came in there as a refuge from the 'Grits." INTENTION OF THE OUTRAGE. In reply to the judge, Mr. Osler said that the attic charges came under the 87th section, which declared it was an infringement of the law to encourage a voter to drink, so that he would be helpless, and then to restrain him from going out. Mr. Osler said that the window of the attic was left open for ventilation, which was probably badly needed, and the rush of the voters to these windows had not been calculated on by the officers of the organization. Mr. Osler referred to the testimony of George Johnton, who gave his evidence very clearly. Johnston said he had been taken to the Conservative Club by Frank Wright to see about his vote. Howard's money, and Wright was not called. Witness Chalmers says he saw this transaction from beginning to end. Wright promised a receipt and said he was taking it for safe-keeping. Howard wanted to get out, and said he could take charge of his money himself. Nove day, Howard, swore.

THE ATTACK ON THE WITNESSES "With all due deference to the character of these attic witnesses, they are thought good enough to take to their club rooms. It would have been a good deal better instead of criticis-ing Johnston's evidence, to have met it with the evidence of Wright and McCoubrey.

"That there was restraint on Johnston is proved by the fact that he was the man at the window, and was seen at dusk by independent witnesses. He threw his cap out and his cap was picked up.

ALD, CARROTHERS' CONDUCT. "We have shown that the before election Stevenson was with Cooper, a Liberal, when Ald. Judge Ferguson-Wasn't Carrothers' treating general? Mr. Osler—Carrothers treats when it is thought he cannot recover he is selling beer, but on the day before the election he takes a voter away

Carrothers was just the class of voter Carrothers (who spent $30 a week in treating), was qualified to pick up. This was the testimony of McFadden, a cus-toms house clerk appointed by the Conservatives. Yet Carrothers swore Why was Stevenson in such a condition next day? And why did John- first. Moss had delivered 200 pounds of ice in the back room of the Conservative Club. "Who ordered the ice?" Moss had been asked. "Goosey Wheeler." replied Moss Wheeler was a hanger-on of the Conservative party, paid by Mr. Toothe. On June 19 Wheeler had been paid $1 50 ter Moss had delivered the ice, Wheeler told him to drive around to the front of the club. Then Wheeler takes Moss upstairs one flight, and Wheeler told a gentleman to give Moss 25 cents. Mr. Osler then argued that Tracey was an agent and repeated that Major Beattie's advertisement called upon all Conservatives to go to the club to work-not to drink. Tracey was proved an agent by the evidence of John Sherlock, Pat Moore, and John R. Minhinnick. Sherlock said Tracey had canvassed him. Moore said Tra-cey had canvassed him and paid him money. J. R. Minhinnick had sworn that he frequently consulted Tracey about election work. Howard was a voter, drunk and in danger of being bun in by the police, the day before the election, and Minhinnick, according to his own account, took him up to the attic, and left him sitting near the beer barrel. Minhinnick, Howard swore, invited him to go to the attic to have refreshments, Minhinnick asked him to take two glasses and he took it. Frank Wright tried to take himself. Next day, Howard swore, Wright gave him back a portion of his money and promised him the remainder next pay day.
