No Mediation For Russia

Emperor Decided to Refuse All Proposals and Push the War.

Will Be No Repetition of Berlin Congress and Will Dictate Own Terms.

St. Petersburg, April 25.—The Associated Press is enabled to announce authoritatively that the talk of mediation in the Russian-Japanese war was founded upon the personal desires of King Edward and King Christian of Denmark to avoid further bloodshed and end the conflict, but that the steps initiated have utterly failed. The Emperor with the full concurrence of the Imperial family and his advisers has firmly decided not only to reject all proposals looking to intervention, but to prosecute the war with all the resources of the empire until victory crowns the Russian arms, and then when the time comes for peace to make terms directly with the enemy. The interference of outside powers will not be tolerated. There is to be no repetition of the Berlin congress. Furthermore, the Associated Press is authorized to state that Russia will in no wise consider herself bound by the proposition made to Japan previous to the war. The hostilities have wiped out the engagements Russia offered to make with Japan regarding Korea and Manchuria. Russia will consider herself free to impose such terms as she desires.

Seoul, Korea, April 25.—That the civil as well as the military occupation of Korea is effective is evidenced by the economic developments under consideration and the extension of banking activity. Matsumato, a capitalist of Osaka, Japan, proposes to utilize Korean and Japanese capital for the organization of a bank similar in its scope to the Russo-Chinese bank in China, to finance and stimulate industrial enterprise, M. Nagamori, whose agricultural investigations have resulted in the formulation of extensive schemes for the cultivation of the waste lands of Korea, is at the fread of another banking venture in Korea.

Claims to Be Real Discoverer

Robt. Henderson Says He Four.d First Rich Klondike Claim.

Is En Route to Ottawa to Present His Case to the Government.

Robert Henderson, whose contention to the right of discovery of the Klondike has long engrossed the serious attention of the Dominion government, has arrived in the city en route to Ottawa to personally present his claim, says the Seattle Post-Intelligencer of yesterday. The Canadian anthorities have intimated that he should appear at the Dominion capital. While is Seattle he is a guest at the Northern hotel.

While in the records of the district While in the records of the district the name of George Carmack is earolled as its discoverer. Henderson has a great mass of testimony in the shape of affidavits and statements from pioneers of the Yukon tending to show that he had sluice boxes in operation on Hunker creek in July previous to Carmack's discovery of gold on Bonanza August 16, 1896. Of his claim Henderson says:

August 16, 1896. Of his claim Henderson says:

"Having mined with varying success in Colorado, Utah and Arizona, I left Seattle for Alaska in March, 1894, on a steamer whose name I do not remember. Of course at that time there was practically only one way to get in, and that was by Dyea and the dangerous Chilkoot pass. We made it down to Ogilvil and proceeded on to Quartz, a tributary of Indian riwer. I was in search of float gold and quartz gold and found both. The float gold I found in the streams and the other in the footbills of the mountains. Hughey Day and his brother Al had preceded men and had long worked on the bars of the Yukon, Indian and Stewart riwers. In fact, the pioneers had been taking gold from the bars of the Yukon for twenty years or more before I saw the river.

"I prospected on the Indian river the river.

"I prospected on the Indian river tributaries and other streams of the district, now known as the Klondike, until the summer of 1896. Having in July staked and established sluice boxes on All Gold, now Hunker, and Gold Bottom creeks, 1 returned to Ogilvil for supplies. Securing an outfit, I started down the Yukon again for the diggings I had discovered. At the mouth of Klondike river I came upon George Carmack and his Indian relatives, Skookum Jim and Tagish Charley.

"Anyway, they were fishing for salmon. I felt friendly to Carmack and concluded to tell him of my discovery. "George,' I said, addressing him, 'you had better come over and stake on All Gold and Gold Bottom,' "Well, I will tell you what I will do,' he repied, having heard my story of the flattering prospects on the creek.' I will take my Indians and stake the creek.'

"Tm inviting you as a friend. The Indian is not a prospector, and I don't want you to bring any of them up "Tom inviting you as a friend. The want you to bring any of them up there."

"However, I consented that he should bring Skookum Jim and Tagish Charley along as packers, which he did. They staked ou Gold Bottom, all three of them. Carmack and the two Indians then started back across the divide to Bonanza, then known as Rabbit creek. I asked George if he was going to prospect on the way, and he replied that he was a little, but that he was going out to his salmon nets.

"He then, at my request, promised that if he found any good-looking prospects on Rabbit to send one of his Indians back and let me know, and I would pay the man for his services. He remaised. He had not gone far down Rabbit until he found coarse gold. He panned on rimrock with sensational results. He was so excited over his discovery on Bonanza that he forgot all about his old friend Bob, hastened out to Forty-Mile and recorded as the discoverer of the district.

"We had sixty days from the time of staking in which to record, so I took my time, not dreaming of what Carmack was doing. Before the sixty days passed I arrived at Forty-Mile. I asked Judge Constantine to record but one claim in this district. It was then for the first time that I learned of Carmack's coming out and claiming the wight of discovery of the district.

"I made the best of the situation and recorded one claim, No. 3 Hunker, or All Gold, as it was then known. Soon after this, I met with an accident which laid me up and I lost the claim, being unable to represent it.

"Since then this claim paid royalty on $450,000, after which it was sold for $200,000, after which it owns it.

"I bear Carmack no ill will, but I do claim the right of discovery, and that is what is taking me back to Ottawa. If they will give me the amount of ground or its equivalent in money I was entitled to as discoverer I shall have nothing further to say."

Henderson is 48 years of age and a Canadian by birth. He was born at Pictou, Nova Scotia. This is his second trip out since he went to Alaska in 1894.
