

"I think I was, uncle."

"If we are humble and wise there is a great deal of happiness within our reach, but we must try to make others happy as well as ourselves. We cannot be happy without contentment, we cannot be content without peace, we cannot have peace unless we have the hope of Heaven; and we cannot reasonably hope for Heaven unless we have a humble faith in the Saviour, and obey Him. To put the matter in the simplest form that I can, Peter, try to make others happy, be content with little, look on the sunny side of things, fear God and keep His commandments, and take my word for it,

'As much of happiness will then be given

'As youth and age can have on this side Heaven.'

'Godness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come.—(1 Tim. iv. 8.)'—Child's Companion.
