

fluctuates considerably depending on flooding or drought. The country's education sector, which receives about $17 million a year, is currently the primary focus of Canada's long-term development assistance.