

As noted at the outset of the above paper, the main purpose of the workshop was to provide a forum for the exchange of views and ideas. However, one point that emerged from the discussion was the need to ensure that in order to properly communicate our agenda(s), we cannot rely on the mainstream media. Instead, we must find alternative means of communication, such as public hearings and workshops.

FURTHER THOUGHTS

Despite our very interesting discussion, there were a number of points that were raised which deserve to be mentioned. First, there were a number of points raised which they deserve to be mentioned. In particular, the need to ensure that the workshop properly addressed the issues of the forest. While it is true that the workshop did discuss the issues of the forest, it was not clear that the workshop was able to address the issues of the forest. Second, the composition of the group was not ideal. There was a lack of representation from the developing world. It is important to ensure that the workshop is able to address the issues of the forest. As a result, the workshop was not able to address the issues of the forest.

"The Forest discussion group was as diverse as the forest."

Carol Young, Asian and Pacific Development Centre, Malaysia

"There is a need to recognize the integrity of the forest as requiring protection, not strictly economic values based on harvesting."
