EMPIRE CLUB HEARS LEON M. GOUIN

Son of Quebec's Premier Makes Plea for United Canada.

Leon Mercier Gouin, son of Sir Lomer Gouin, premier of Quebec, addressed the Empire Club at luncheon yesterday, when a large attendance received him with great applause. Mr. Gouin is a young man, very dark, wearing glasses, and speaks with a vibrant, virile voice.

"I hope you are not disappointed to see how awfully young I look, and I thank you for your most cordial welcome," was his first greeting. Mr. Gouin drew most of his authority from Laurier, Baldwin and Sir John A. Macdonald.

"We must truly desire to see a united Canada," he declared. He had no official standing, he said, but was only one young man come from Quebec to discuss a question of vital import to Canada and the empire as well.

A very short and very plain talk was all that he intended. Whether there was a stronger power in London, whether there was imperial federation or not, they needed free communion with every part of the widespread empire, and he pleaded for a common ideal of democracy and religious toleration.

After all, they all co-operated to the same end, and they could only work for the empire thru Canada, and what they did for the empire must help Canada.

They expected Canada to enjoy external harmony as well as internal unity. But they were still far from either one or other.

From Laurier's teaching they had learned in Quebec that they must all have an ambition—to contribute unitedly and heartily to the interest of the two races and to their unity. This was their first duty as Canadian citizens. It was essential that they should strive to make out of the nine provinces a single nation. They needed a campaign over the whole country for Canadian patriotism. (Applause.) In all groups, literary and popular, in all classes, they must develop the truth of patriotism.

Lack National Pride

They lacked national pride, a virtue which was more necessary than any other. They could be good Canadians tho they spoke two languages and prayed to God in a different manner. Switzerland had been the model of all confederation and had shown that toleration was the key to all success in this aim.

Everybody should understand that our country was large enough to hold both races. But no one should try to assimilate them. They would resist that, he said. Every man in Quebec was prepared to learn to speak English, and better than he did. Mutual goodwill and mutual respect would enable them to bridge any chasm that had existed.

What prevented them from living as good neighbors, as friends, as partners? Many thought that a French-Canadian must sacrifice his race, his language in order to serve the nation. A man could be a good Scotsman and a good Briton and he thought a man could be a good Canadian as well as a good Irishman or a good French-Canadian.

Robert Baldwin's name was venerated in Quebec as a true patriot and a true Canadian, and Mr. Gouin instanced him as an example of tolerant Canadianism. Patriotism was the love of the land in which one was born, but it was more than that, and must be intellectual.

Greater Toleration

They must all work for a united Canada. They could work for that by a better understanding between the two races, by greater toleration. They only needed to bring the two races together to create a true patriotism. They could enjoy together the great benefit of British parliamentary institutions. In welcoming the people of Quebec in the charming way they had welcomed him they were taking the best way to unite the two peoples. They should visit each other more, sit more frequently at the same time, and they would find peace and goodwill arise out of such communion.

The press could afford much assistance by devoting more space to writers in each province contributing to the press of the other. The university could assist the campaign by education and the promotion of ideals, and there should be exchange among the students. It was excellent under the Rhodes scholarships to send one French-Canadian every three years to England, but it was not enough. He suggested that ten French-Canadian students should annually attend the Ontario universities either for letters or sciences, and vice versa. There should also be an exchange of professors. The leading professors of Laval would be glad to come and address Ontario students, and Ontario professors could do the same, and so first-hand information could be had of social, of educational, of labor questions. Laurier had taught them that their province was not their country, but that their country extended from sea to sea. All they wanted was to practise their faith and to learn their own language.

If instead of peace and harmony they tried to seek for differences and grievances they could not bring about the unity. He hoped they would cultivate the self-same love for Canada, "this blessed land of ours."

A letter of thanks from the Prince of Wales was read by President R. A. Stapells.

Mr. John M. Godfrey voiced the thanks of the club to Mr. Gouin. It was just three years since they had heard Premier Gouin and the address they had just heard convinced him that eloquence, like red hair, must run in some families.

BREWERYMEN THOROLY ORGANIZED

John Corcoran, business agent for the Union of Brewery Workers, which are organized one hundred per cent. in the two Toronto breweries, stated yesterday afternoon to The World that if prohibition had not been so seriously considered during the past two years men in the brewery trade would have received an average wage of $28 a week instead of the union wage new received, $21. However, he said, the trade was now in a more stable condition than at any time during the period following the declaration of war, and much was anticipated for the future. Two hundred and fifty men in the trade are organized in Toronto.

AN IMPORTANT MEETING

Printing pressmen, members of the union affiliated with the Canadian Federation of Labor, have been advised to attend the meeting to be held on Saturday night at the S. O. E. in view of the importance of matters under consideration. This union has more than 300 members, and many of the men who joined the C. E. F. have returned to their old stands. Questions of policy are embodies in by-laws to be submitted for ratification.

BAKERS SEEK SHORT HOUR WEEK

Circularizing the bakery workers of Toronto, the National Bakers' Union, which is combining forces with the Bread and Cake Salesmen's Association, states that the union anticipates a 44-hour week by May 1, 1920, as well as a warranted increase in pay. The union, it points out, is working for legislation to prohibit night work in the bakeries in the province.

Joseph Walsh stated yesterday afternoon that the Internationals had also gone on record as favoring day work in this industry, and that thru the efforts of Local 244 the Dominion Trades Congress legislative committee was already in touch with the government at Ottawa with a view to securing Dominion legislation to this end.

Both the nationals and the internationals are holding organization meetings on Saturday night, the nationals at Occident Hall and the internationals at the Labor Temple.

O. B. U. ACTIVITIES

Joseph Knight, general organizer for the One Big Union in eastern Canada, and member of the general executive board of the O. B. U., stated to The World last night that he had returned from a successful tour of the western sector of Ontario. He visited Hamilton, Guelph, Windsor and other western Ontario towns. In Hamilton he organized several hundred machinists and electrical men; in Carleton Place (which b(y the way is near Ottawa) he organized 80 stove workers, 200 general workers and 450 textile workers; in Windsor he organized 400 textile workers and 150 general workers. There were in Toronto, he said, about 2,000 members of the union. He is visiting Montreal within the next ten days.

WEARING THE GREEN

Letters are being received by housewives in Toronto from the Toronto Bread and Cake Salesmen's Association asking for co-operation in getting bread drivers to join the union. Ways and means to this end as considered in this letter consist of seeing to it that the bread salesman when he calls at the householder's door wears the union button.

It is alleged that accused kept company with a young man living in the house and learned that Mrs. Norton was in the habit of hanging her door key on a string in the letter box. Entrance to the home is alleged to have been made thru the prisoner securing the key and entering during the absence of the members of the household.

EDWARD C. FOX.
For some time general manager of the William Davies Company, who heads the new syndicate that has bought out the Flavelle interests.

FLAVELLE SELLS CONTROL OF FIRM

Manager E. C. Fox of Wm. Davies Company Buys Sir Joseph's Stock.

Announcement was made yesterday from the office of the William Davies Co., Ltd., pork packers, that Sir Joseph Flavelle, Bart., had sold his stock in the concern to the general manager, E. C. Fox, and his associates. Sir Joseph held 52 per cent. of the stock and, therefore, control in the business passes into new hands. The official announcement also states that a reorganization of the concern is taking place and that new capital is being acquired to take care of expansions including the acquisition of a new packing plant on the American side of the line.

Last week's issue of The Sunday World carried a story that treasury stock of the William Davies Company had been sold to an American concern, possibly Wilson and Company, and that Sir Joseph had agreed to sell his own stock or part of it to the American concern to give them control. The official announcement partly substantiates The Sunday World's story.

The announcement follows:

"There is no foundation whatever to the rumor that the William Davies Company has been sold in whole or in part to large American interests.

"The rumor undoubtedly has its rise in the fact that negotiations have been taking place between myself and a group of associates on the one hand, and Sir Joseph Flavelle on the other hand, for the purchase of Sir Joseph Flavelle's complete interest in this company, which is a controlling interest.

Decide to Reorganize.

"These negotiations have now been closed, and a necessary part of the transaction is a reorganization. We have taken advantage of the reorganization to enlarge our American business by the acquisition of a packing house, and also to provide extra working capital.

"It will be our policy to list the share capital of the Davies Company on the stock exchange, and, therefore, an annual statement of the affairs of this company will thereafter be made."

Sir Joseph Flavelle was general manager of the William Davies Company from 1892 to 1912, when he became president and was succeeded as general manager by E. C. Fox, grandson of William Davies.

The New Head.

In the announcement that E. C. Fox is assuming the leadership among the important interests of the Wm. Davies Co., the city has an example of the rapid rise of a young Canadian thru the essential qualities of business ability. Mr. Fox has always exhibited a stalwart patriotism, and as a president of the Canadian Club displayed an interest in public affairs, which he may be hoped to maintain and develop. It is gratifying to think that Canada is able to produce the equal of any type of young man required to fight her battles at home or abroad, and the public will be glad to hear that Mr. Fox's new venture is as fully Canadian as his previous career gives the right to expect.

ORGANIZING RAPIDLY.

P. J. Flannery, general organizer for the American Federation of Labor has organized five lodges of the International Union of Freight-handlers in western Ontario towns during the past two weeks.

CITY HALL NOTES

When Mr. Pickwick, just before his famous trial for breach of promise, observed to his solicitor that he hoped the judge's breakfast chop was nicely grilled as it would put him in a good temper, he showed a great insight into human nature. Controller McBride would seem to be regulated as to temperament in some such manner as Mr. Pickwick's judge. On Wednesday he called the Red Triangle Club a pest house and asserted some of the men got drunk there. Yesterday at the board of control he moved a resolution "that we request the Y.M.C.A. to carry on the club as it is at present until June next." This right-about-turn would seem to show that the controller's chop was nicely cooked yesterday morning.

The deputation on the Red Triangle question consisted of Col. J. A. Currie, M.P., Captain Jim Wallace, T. G. Stubbs and P. T. Lee of the National Council of the Y. M. C. A., the latter of whom stated that his organization had decided to close that part of the building occupied by the cafeteria. The mayor said it was advisable to keep the place open during the winter as the men had nowhere else to go. Mr. Lee promised to see what could be done in the matter after the board had unanimously passed the controller's resolution.

Controller McBride had one supporter—Controller McBride—yesterday in opposing a motion to ask the government to increase the Hydro Commission to five members, make the chairman's terms six years or more and that the representatives on the commission be appointed with the approval of Sir Adam Beck. The controller said "absolutely no" to the proposal as he objected to commissioners being dictated to by Sir Adam or to giving him a "big fat" job for six years—there were many men just as capable, he declared. Mr. McBride also had a grievance about the construction of the Chippawa scheme. After a spirited debate the original motion was carried, only Controller McBride objecting.

A committee composed of representatives of the King Street Merchants' Association, city officials, the Ontario government, the harbor board, the railway companies, the steamship companies, the board of trade, the branches of the law society, will meet the board of control to discuss the proposed widening of York street, the establishment of a new street between Bay and York and the extension of University avenue from Queen to Front streets.

It will cost just $2,000 to advertise the bylaws to be submitted to the ratepayers on January 1 next. To publish the bylaws so that the public could really understand them would, on a proportional calculation, cost at least $20,000.

The board of control will not permit the parks department to purchase a nursery farm until after next year's estimates are considered.

An outstanding dispute since 1912 between the city and the G.T.R. was settled by the board of control yesterday. The question at issue was to settle the boundary site at Sunnyside station. The land required by the railway has a total area of 8,648 feet and the company have agreed to pay $16,834 or $1.75 per square foot. Cash will be paid with five per cent. interest since 1912. Commissioner Forman will now officially close the deal.

Dr. Hastings' lengthy report in defence of vaccination, which the board of control ordered printed and circulated, required the approval of the board of control before being issued. Controller McBride and Robbins opposed its publication at the board's meeting yesterday, whilst the mayor and Controller Maguire approved it. Controller Cameron was absent. As the division resulted in a tie vote the matter will go on to the council, when it is expected all the old anti and pro-vaccination arguments will be gone over again for the "umpty-umpth" time.

Commissioner of Works Harris has served notice on D. H. McDougall, vice-president of the Toronto Electric Light Company, to remove within a month all the company's poles now "beautifying" the city streets.

The board of control will confer with the presidents of the board of trade and the C.M.A. in regard to opposing the telegraph companies' application for increased rates. It will cost some $5,000 to obtain expert evidence, according to an estimate by City Solicitor Johnston.

The board of control have consented to the erection of an apartment house with stores on the ground level at the corner of Gerrard street and Kingsmount Park road.

The city officials are preparing for another all-night sitting of the council on Monday next as there is every likelihood that the bulky report will contain such delectable matter—such as transportation, Hydro affairs and smallpox—that the time limit for ordinary meetings will be far exceeded.

The York Radial yesterday gave notice to the city that it is seeking leave before the appellate division to appeal from the order of the railway board approving the plans of the Mount Pleasant line. This is the first step on the long road to the privy council, and if the appeal is permitted the construction of the line will be held up.

GIVEN HIS PORTRAIT

Oil Painting of Himself Presented to Ex-Controller John O'Neill by Capt. Ramsden on Behalf of City.

The presentation of an oil painting of himself was made to ex-Controller John O'Neill at his residence, 370 East Dundas street, last night at 7 o'clock. Capt. Jack Ramsden, M.C., M.L.A., made the presentation, and a number of friends of "Honest John" were present. Mayor Church congratulated the ex-controller as one of the foremost citizens of Toronto and also for his work in connection with the board of control. Among those present were D. Chisholm, property commissioner; George Wilson, street commissioner; Ald. Ramsden and several other city officials.

POOR PROSPECTS FOR MT. PLEASANT

Bloor St. Extension to Take Most of Money Pledged to Line.

The building of the West Bloor street line and the Mount Pleasant line will one day be an accomplished fact and then, and only then, will peace reign supreme in the board of control. Day after day something in connection with one of these lines comes before the board and creates a "scene." Yesterday proved no exception to the rule and the old familiar faces and the old familiar arguments were all brought into service.

The discussion started when a deputation from West Toronto came before the board to ask for the immediate construction of the Bloor street extension of the civic car line. D'Arcy Hinds, as the deputation's head, said the people wanted the line built right away, and it would cost something like $200,000. He contended that the board were stalling today on the question just as they had done for three years past.

After the mayor had threatened to adjourn the meeting if order was not kept between the various factions present, he moved that council be recommended to apply to the legislature for a private bill to provide the money without assessing the ratepayers.

Commissioner Bradshaw admitted that there was about $290,000 in the bank, but there was a difference of opinion as to what line it could be used for. "The officials are between the devil and the deep sea," he complained.

Attempt to Kill Project.

Controller Maguire: "That money was intended for the Mount Pleasant line, and this is an attempt to kill the Mount Pleasant project."

Commissioner Harris said he could not start construction of a permanent line until the frost period was over, but he could get the material on the ground.

Controller McBride moved an amendment to the mayor's resolution to proceed with the work at once and that the necessary funds be provided out of the $284,000 in the bank.

Controller Maguire again said that it was a deliberate attempt to block the Mount Pleasant line. "If we go ahead with the Bloor street line will you still recognize that the $284,000 in the bank belongs to the Mount Pleasant line?" he asked.

Controller McBride: "No."

For Mount Pleasant.

Ald. Ball said the money in the bank was for the Mount Pleasant line.

After Mr. Hinds had further pleaded his case, there came a further flurry from Controller McBride, who accused Ald. Ball of whispering things to Controller Maguire.

"I'll tell you what I said," volunteered Ald. Ball.

"I'm not asking you, you are not a member of this board," shouted Controller McBride.

Whack! whack! whack! Down came the mayor's gavel again. "I'll adjourn this board if the rules of debate are not followed," declared his worship.

"You'll never get your line unless you get it now," said Controller McBride.

"We know," said Mr. Hinds.

Controller McBride's motion to take the money out of the bylaw fund and proceed with the line forthwith was passed unanimously, Controller McBride emphasizing the fact that the amendment ordered the work to be carried out "forthwith."

CANADIAN PRESS DELEGATES MEET

President Considers Production Only Remedy to Right Trade Balance.

Several hundred delegates from all over the Dominion assembled yesterday morning in the King Edward Hotel for the opening of the sixty-first annual convention of the Canadian Press Association. W. J. Taylor of The Sentinel-Review, Woodstock, in his presidential address said:

"What work can the press of Canada do; in what undertaking can it engage to make Canada a better place to live in? If I were asked to suggest something that the press of Canada might do to pave the way for such a condition, I would say that amongst other things the press should cultivate a keen eye for social and industrial justice, that it should advocate and continue to advocate the abolition of privilege and concern itself with the interest of the masses. To do this newspapers require, above all other things, courage and energy and a sincerity and honesty of purpose. They must show character and leadership, and last, but not the least, a sincere anxiety to serve the people. Given these there is no limit to what the newspapers can accomplish.

Prosperity Artificial.

"I believe that I would be shirking my responsibility if I did not say that I believe that too much of the prosperity that we see about us is of too artificial a nature and therefore ephemeral. I do not believe that the present inflated prices of commodities can continue indefinitely. The sooner we realize this the better.

"Another matter I would like to refer to briefly. Canada is a sparsely settled country, its eight million people, scattered over a territory four thousand miles wide, carrying a national debt, to say nothing of provincial, municipal and private debts, now approaching two billions of dollars. To meet the interest charges on these obligations and to right this trade balance we must, where possible, decrease our imports and increase our exports. Our increase of exports cannot be accomplished without an increase in production; and increased production and further decreases in the number of working hours do not go hand in hand."

The convention enthusiastically endorsed the Empire Press Union conference, to be held in Toronto in August and September next year, and it was unanimously resolved that an executive committee consisting of Lord Atholstan, of The Montreal Star; J. E. Atkinson, of The Toronto Star; P. D. Ross, of The Ottawa Journal, and W. J. Taylor be appointed to make all the necessary arrangements in Canada in co-operation with the Empire Press Union.

Who'd be a Scrooge?

You wouldn't intentionally. But you might be one and not even know it.

Supposing that you were to die before another Christmas came around, would your kiddies' stockings be as well filled next year? Or might they not lack even some of the necessities of life?

Among other gifts this Christmas why not present your wife with an Imperial Home Protection policy.

That would be a most practical gift; based on generosity and kindness; banishing worry, anxiety and care; making Christmas all the happier and the New Year all the more hopeful for yourself and loved ones, in the knowledge that, come what may, the future is provided for.

LABORATORY NEVER ANALYZED VACCINE

Nicholson Firm Refutes Statements in Anti-Vaccination Advertisement.

Lewis Nicholson of the Nicholson Laboratories, College street, contradicts the statement appearing in the Anti-Vaccination League advertisement in a recent evening paper, in which Dr. John B. Fraser is alleged to have stated that "he placed a sample of the vaccine supplied by the provincial laboratories in a sterile tube and sent it to the Nicholson Laboratories to be incubated, and that Nicholson Laboratories reported the presence of streptococci and staphylococci confirming the results of Dr. Fraser's own laboratory examination."

Mr. Nicholson states that he did not receive the vaccine at all, but merely a culture. The culture received from Dr. John B. Fraser by the Nicholson Laboratories contained the staphylococcus albus, but no streptococci.

At the time of examination, the laboratories did not know that this culture was taken from smallpox vaccine.

Negotiations for the purchase of the 90-foot square lot at the corner of Kenilworth avenue and Queen street, at the purchase price of $22,500, have been completed by the Beaches branch of the G.W.V.A.

It is proposed by the branch to erect a clubhouse on the site for the use of returned men of the association in the Beaches district. Plans are being made for this building to include a large meeting hall on the second floor, and every conceivable kind of a reception-room on the basement floor. It is also proposed that the building frontage consist of stores, which will provide a source of revenue to the branch and assist in the upkeep.

With these improvements in view, it is anticipated that the membership of the branch will be considerably increased. An open meeting of the branch will be held in the Kew Beach School tonight, when the referendum vote will be taken. It is expected that Dr. Wilson, president of the Central Branch; Col.
