London, March 5.—The cheese importers are anxious that the Canadian Parliament should add to the Government Cheese bill a clause compelling the branding of the month of the make on each cheese. The large London, Bristol and Glasgow merchants especially replying to inquiries, say they nust know that they get what they order or otherwise the trade will suffer. The act, they say, should enforce the branding of the date under heavy penalties.

The Imperial Authorities are Investigating This Assumption of Territory. London, March 5 .- The Colonial Of-London, March 5.—The Colonial Office has called for further details respecting the United States assumption of three million acres of British territory of high commercial and strategic value on the Pacific Coast, opposite Prince of Wales Island. Despite the denials of Gen. Duffield of the United States Survey, the official records here fully confirm the statements. The Colonial Office is inquiring as to how far the joint Canadian and as to how far the joint Canadan and United States commission dealt with this section of the Alaskan boundary, below the 56th parallel, which the officials here hold to be of greater importance even than the boundary above the 56th parallel.

The subject matter was of great interest and value to farmers and of the genand value to farmers and of the gentlemen present, nearly all of whom were interested in agricultural matters. In the course of his remarks, he made reference to the best fertilizers for various products and said at Agassiz, B.C., Canada had the largest fruit testing station in the world. A big kick was made by Mr. McGregor and others on the fact that information rekick was made by Mr. McGregor and others on the fact that information relating to the experiments at Government farms was not distributed. It was stated that unless such reports were given to the farmers the money expended in this way was simply thrown away. What appears to justify this assumption is the sudden determination of the Local Government to rush business before the Legislature, so that prorogation may be reached next week. Others, however, say that the Government hastens business so that preparations may be made for the general elections. New York, March 5.—A London special to The Sun says the sad sequel to the romantic attempted suicide in Rome, cabled to The Sun on last Saturday, is reported in a despatch that has come to hand to-night. It is learned that the lady before whose portrait Signor Baccelli shot himself last week is the Marquise Theodoli, an American woman who married the Marquis nearly 18 years ago, and since then has been one of the recognized leaders in Roman society. She is about 40 years old, and poor Emilo Baccelli had lived in the world only 22 years. His passion for the Marquise was a mad infatuation, and, neeedless to say, he never received the slightest encouragement from the lady.

REMEDIAL BILL

erity in Manitoba Lost ?—Hon. Mr. Ives Takes Up the Cudgels for the Govern-

Ottawa, March 5.-(Special)-The Hon. Mr. Ives, resuming the debate on the Remedial bill, said that as the representative of the Protestant minority of Quebec he had naturally given a great deal of study to the manner in which the position was affected by the present question. He gave a resume of the school laws of Ontario and Quebec at the time of Confederation, showing that the Cetholic metality is Original Confederation. present question. He gave a resume of the school laws of Ontario and Quebec at the time of Confederation, showing that the Catholic majority in Quebec really controlled the machinery by which the Protestant schools were conducted and therefore had it in their power to destroy the usefulness of their schools by imposing objectionable text-books, etc., upon them. In the school laws of Ontario the same defect was observable as regards absence of safeguards for the preservation of the Roman Catholic character of the Separate schools. Then the Legislature of the Province of Quebec, in pursuance of the promise of Sir Hector Langevin and Sir George E. Cartier, passed an act establishing the composition of the Council of Public Instruction, the board to be composed of a certain number of Protestants; and to these Protestants was left the entire management of the dissentient schools. More than that, the fund for higher education was divided proportionately as to the population between the Protestants and Roman Catholics. So that instead of the Protestants of Montreal getting but one-fourth and of Ontario but two-thirds of their contribution, they were given the whole of it. It would be seen, therefore, why he was concerned for the maintenance of the Constitutional rights.

Justifies the Government,

He proceeded to justify the action of the Government in the course it had taken. If Mr. Greenway had been anxious to remedy the Catholic grievance he could have done it long ago. (Hear, hear.) What need was there for investigation? The French Liberals do not want any investigation, because they have already made up their minds that the present bill is not strong enough. The Government do not require any investigation; they are satisfied. They have rendered their judgment and that judgment is in accordance with the judgment of the Privy Council. The irreconcilables in this House do not want any information, because if you were to pump information, because if you were to pump information into them for a hundred years they woul dragoon some of his followers into supporting him? Does he want to go to the country with this question unsettled?

Mr. Laurier—No.
Mr. Laurier—No.
Mr. Ives—I do not think he does. I do not think he is wise if he wants this question kept open. Surely Mr. Greenway can afford a remedy. Mr. Greenway can afford a remedy. Mr. Greenway can adopt any remedy he thinks justifiable and right and proper and can pass it long before we get out of committee on this bill. The Government of this country are not anxious to interfere with this question. I admit with Sir Oliver Mowat that our interference should be the last resort; but we do not think, from anything we have seen, that either Mr. Greenway or Mr. Laurier or the Librari party who have been making a football of this question for the last five years are anxious to have it "settled." We think the responsibility rests upon us to do justice to the minority in Manitoba who have waited five years are anxious to have it "settled." We do not propose to make those people a football of the politicians for anxiother year or two, and if Mr. Laurier's policy is further investigation why did he move the six months' hoist, during which there can be no investigation. Why did he not come out with his own motion based on the opinion of Sir Oliver Mowat and move for his commission? Why indeed? Because his irreconcilable supporters in this House would not vote for it. When the two great parties in Parliament so nearly agree upon this matter as to regard it as merely a question of when—whether now or a few weeks or months in the two great parties in Parliament on the two great parties to other day referred to question, I say it is the duty of all parties to join together and agree upon a settlement of the question of wh
