Six Delightful Ways To Serve Corn Dishes.

- Leave some of the hull on the cob, when boiling corn, as this will give it an additional sweet flavor. Ten minutes of cooking in boiling water should be ample for fresh sweet corn on the cob, and sometimes even less than that is sufficient. Keep the corn well covered with boiling water and test frequently to be sure that it isn't cooked a minute too long; this will render it tough and tasteless.
- A delicious variation on the boiled corn is:
- Roast Corn.
Scrape the kernels off the cob and boil for about 20 minutes in two quarts of water to which one cupful of milk and one teaspoonful of salt have been added. Drain, place in a buttered dish and bake until brown. Baste every few minutes with melted butter.
- Corn Fritters.
2 cupfuls of corn
1 tablespoonful of butter
2 cupfuls of milk
1 teaspoonful of salt
Paprika
Chop the corn, add the beaten eggs and butter and milk with seasoning. Pour into a greased baking dish and bake until light brown.
- A delicious vegetable combination is made by using absolutely fresh corn and fresh lima beans in the succotash mixture. If the very best of ingredients are used this is a rich and substantial dish.
- Fresh Succotash.
1 cupful of fresh corn
1 cupful of fresh lima beans
2 tablespoonfuls of butter
1 cupful of top milk
Salt
- Corn Souffle.
1½ cupfuls of cooked corn
½ cupful of milk
1 egg
1 tablespoonful of butter
1 tablespoonful of flour
Salt, pepper
Melt the butter and blend with the flour. Gradually pour on the milk, stirring constantly until smooth. Add the corn and the beaten egg yolk. Whip the egg white and fold in, turn into a greased baking dish and bake for 30 minutes.

How to Banish Wrinkles
That Mar Your Beauty

By Lucrezia Bori, The Famous Spanish Prima Donna.

Wrinkles write their story as clearly as the pen. They are usually caused by age, worry or ill health. Sometimes growing or defective sight also produces these unattractive lines. It is the natural ambition of every woman to put off the day of wrinkles as long as she can. That age may be beautiful has been shown many times, both in art and the reflection of serenity in the lovely old faces that greet us every day. It is the young "old" woman who must beware of these unpleasant lines that make her look old before her time.

A great French beauty once said that wrinkles are an "appendage of the negligent." This beauty is said to have used on her face and hands a lotion which is made as follows:

Boil three ounces of pearl barley in a pint of water until the gluten is extracted. Then strain this liquid and add 25 drops of tincture of benzoin.

A pretty but quiet wedding was solemnized in the latter day of the Church, at 11:30 a.m., July 26, when Miss Grace Kitching, 117 Elm street, of Robert Kitching of 117 Elm street, was united in the bonds of matrimony to George Leslie Major of this city. The young couple were unattended. Elder Frank Gray, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony. The happy couple left on the 12:35 train for Detroit. On their return they will reside on Clarence street.

DUNCAN-PANTON.
Grace Church, Milton, was the scene of a very pretty military wedding on Thursday afternoon, July 25, when Miss Margaret, daughter of Major and Mrs. William Panton, was united in the bonds of matrimony to E. P. Duncan, of the Royal Engineers, son of Eben Duncan, M.D., and the late Mrs. Duncan of Glasgow, Scotland. The church was decorated for the occasion with masses of ferns and marigolds and the guests were marked off with white ribbon.

The bride, who was given away by her father, looked charming in a gown of champagne, made very simply, with a straight bodice of satin, the skirt having three fullnesses of Linen lace. The long train was finished all round with a lovely, wide, white and lined with palest pink georgette. The veil was a beautiful, wide, white flower girl, in pale pink, with a basket of sweet peas.

The wedding music was played by Mrs. Hilary, and during the signing of the register Miss Kathleen Cooke sang very sweetly. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, the room being arranged with a coronet of Carriacross lace, the customary wedding of choice blossoms being worn across the back, with one tiny butterfly of lace, worn one on each side, just above the coronet, and a quail and a dove, having three fullnesses of Linen lace. THREE-MINUTE JOURNEYS

Where Men Form "Aged Parents' Death Associations."

Among the peoples of inland China, indeed, among almost any of the vast population of the celestial kingdom—there sometimes is only the barest margin between life and starvation. In the very real sense of living from hand to mouth—and barely living at that—there is perhaps no other people with whom they compare save the Indians of India. For this reason any expense out of the most ordinary is a tragedy.

Add to this the fact that of all peoples the Chinese most revere forms and customs, and we see that to conform to what they believe is right; and proper. To "save their faces" they are sometimes compelled to odd and most unusual efforts.

Experience—usually extending far into the dim and distant past and handed down in the form of advice from father to son—has taught them that by banding together they may achieve their purpose. Thus when a man's parents are well advanced in life and he knows that at any time he may be called upon to spend upon the ceremonies at their death a sum which will be most difficult for him to raise alone, he "invites an association."

That is, this man looks around among his friends and fellow—or nearby—villagers, until he finds several men in like situation. These he invites to join with him in a death benefit society. There may be as many as 40 members, each of whom have agreed to pay to the one who is first bereaved a certain amount of money upon the death of a parent. The sum of these contributions will supply the total necessary for a "proper funeral." A document is drawn up in which it is specified that the funerals are to be conducted on a certain scale of expenditure, and that the funds shall not be diverted to any other use than for a funeral.

being arranged with roses, marigolds and ferns. Mrs. Panton received the guests, wearing a handsome gown of pale grey georgette and satin, a corsage bouquet of orchids and a small black tulle hat. The table was effectively done with pink roses and tulle and centered with the wedding cake, which the bride cut with her husband's sword.

Major and Mrs. Duncan motored to Toronto, to leave later for Algonquin Park, the bride traveling in a smart suit of sand-colored jersey cloth, with navy blue satin vest and a small hat with color, faced with navy blue. Among the out-of-town guests were Major Erskine, brother of the groom, and Mrs. Duncan, and much interest and pleasure was derived from the presence of Kathleen Panton, R. C. sister of the bride, who had been in Toronto for the money he must first supply two bondsmen as surety that he will in his turn pay his share until all the others have completed the debt.

Indeed, it is quite a ceremonious and interesting procedure even though the sum at stake is very small in comparison with our standards. Not the least of these ceremonies are the feasts, without which wedding to wedding, no funeral or any other public gathering in China would be considered complete.

world never have time to think about themselves very much," chirped Brown Cricket. "Why, I don't know when I last looked at myself—I haven't time!"

All of a sudden Daddy Field Mouse jumped into the air with a tiny squeak. "I know what we can do to cure him of his vanity," he squeaked in a funny voice. Then he whiskered some thing in each of his friend's ears. Both agreed that his suggestion might help; at least they were willing to try. So together they hurried off to consult Johnny Grasshopper.

"Just the thing!" exclaimed Johnny Grasshopper.

Then each of the three friends took a tiny basket on his arm. They went out to the big roadside and filled the baskets with dust and hastened back to the mill pond. There they found Jimmy Green Frog sunning himself on the bank, and they threw the dust right down on his nice green coat.

He dropped in great big spots all over him, and when Jimmy Green Frog looked at himself he was horrified. He hid under the stones when the sun is hot, and only comes out after nightfall, because he is ashamed of his mottled green suit.

Of course, when he didn't spend so much time thinking about himself he found plenty of time to help his friends and daddy, so while it was a naughty thing for the meadow folks to do, it cured Jimmy Green Frog of his vanity.
