THE TREATY-MAKING POWER OF THE DOMINIONS

(Manchester Guardian.)

A White Paper issued by the Colonial office sets side by side two views of the position of the colonies in regard to the negotiation of commercial treaties with a foreign power. Both are the views of Liberal ministers, but one makes a considerable advance on the other. In 1895 Lord Ripon, then colonial secretary, laid down the rule that a colony could only approach a foreign power with which it desired to conclude a commercial treaty through a British representative, and that "to give the colonies the power of negotiating treaties for themselves without reference to Her Majesty's government would be to give them an international status as separate and foreign states, and would be equivalent to breaking up the Empire into a number of independent states." Twelve years later, when Canada was anxious to revise her commercial relations with France, Sir Edward Grey substantially modified this doctrine. He left the negotiation of the treaty to the Canadian government, but he insisted that the British government should be kept in the picture, and that the treaty should be approved by the British cabinet. This was the position in 1907, when Canada was anxious to revise her commercial relations with France. Sir Edward Grey justified the change of procedure as principally a matter of convenience, but of course it is more than that. For Canada, instead of merely making the consequences of her treaty-making power, she is now making the consequences of her treaty-making power. What, then, becomes of the consequences of her treaty-making power? The answer is, that the British government is now making the consequences of her treaty-making power. The British government is now making the consequences of her treaty-making power. The British government is now making the consequences of her treaty-making power.

RADWAY'S READY RELIEF
SEA SICKNESS
Take the Relief as a preventive and remedy. It is a pure diffusible stimulant and this is what is chiefly needed. The pills are given also, to prevent sea sickness by the natural change of air. In consequence of the marvelous and rapid effect of the Relief in stopping pain and inflammation, it is invaluable in railway and steamboat accidents. Never travel without it, as accidents are continually happening.

ASK FOR RADWAY'S AND TAKE NO SUBSTITUTES

with very little swelling. This is almost a miracle, but it is as true as the fact that the relief is given by the natural change of air.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

It makes me feel badly to think I can't repay you in some way," said the woman who was receiving the favor, "can't you possibly think of something I can do for you?"

"I know as well as I can," responded the brisk little woman who was bestowing the favor, "so suppose you do it for someone else."

I think all favors, all kindnesses, all helps in life ought to be treated that way. Very often one cannot hope to repay one's benefactors. But I don't think that inability relieves one from the moral obligation to keep the credit and debit sides of one's kindness account with a balance on the right side by "passing it on."

If you do this, I firmly believe that in the great clearing house of kindness the original benefactor will somehow receive his own again.

That wouldn't be any more wonderful than your receiving the money in New York on a check from a bank in San Francisco and the New York bank being safely reimbursed, would it? And, just think, man is managing that business and God the other.

I know a man whose brother many years ago advanced the money to send him to college. He planned to pay it back; but before he finished his course, his brother died. Instead of bewailing himself that he could never pay that kindness back, he "passed it on." That is as soon as he got on his feet financially, he gave the sum of money his own education had cost to another ambitious young man who lacked the funds for the education he craved. And when that boy would have repaid the money, he was told to keep it until he found another ambitious young man who stood in need of it.

And now the fund of that big brother has sent five men to college. I can never repay the newspaper man who gave me the first foothold in the newspaper profession; who explained and smoothed away difficulties that might have proven absolutely insurmountable without his kindness. It is far above any ability of mine to help him.

But I can help some other beginner, and I consider it just as much my obligation to help any of the experienced folk who come into my path as it would be to help him if he needed it.

I think it would be a splendid condition of affairs if every time any of us received a kindness of any kind, we had "passed it on."

What you gave might not always be of the same kind or size as what you received, of course, but just what you had to give.

If your richer neighbor takes you out motoring, why not let that be a reminder for you to send your poorer neighbor some fruit?

Or, if your rich cousin invites you on a yachting trip, why not let that become an obligation to you to invite your poorer cousin to enjoy what is as much a luxury to her as the yachting trip is to you—a week at your summer cottage.

If a kindness to you is shown, 'Tis not meant for you alone.
Pass it on.
Let it dry another's tears,
Let it travel down the years
Till in Heaven it appears.
Pass it on.

Chicago Interested in Exhibition
The state of transportation concessions in favor of the Dominion Exhibition to be held in this city in September is widening greatly. The latest word comes from Chicago, where transportation authorities address Manager Good stating that at a recent meeting special tourist's fares were arranged satisfactory to persons who might be contemplating the autumn trip to this city. It was suggested that the concession that persons living in Chicago and American points west of that city might inquire of their local ticket office for detailed information. This news St. John people can send to their western-American friends.

Another communication from Chicago states that several shippers and manufacturers in that territory are interesting themselves in the coming fair and information was asked concerning space allocations, etc. A generous number of letters pertaining to the exhibition and a letter of detailed information went out in the city mail.
