

A QUEER WAY TO PAY TAXES.—In the concluding part of "Kay's Old Edinburgh Characters," (a most amusing work,) the following anecdote is told of Archie Campbell, who once filled the onerous situation of city officer in the Mo-teru Athens:—"A rather laughable anecdote is told of Archie and Mr Black, surgeon of the Police Establishment, who had his shop at the time referred to in the High Street, a few steps up. Among other tax receipts put into Archie's hands to recover payment, there happened to be two against Mr Black. As usual, the City Officer set out, accompanied by his clerk, whom he instructed to go up and inquire if the surgeon had any answer to the two papers left on a former occasion; for if he had not, he would come and carry off his cabinany (pecacuanha) potlles. Having no particular favour for such customers, and being at the time engaged in adjusting a new patent clarifying machine, with a battery of twelve bottles, the Doctor desired the messenger to return in the course of ten minutes, when he would endeavour to be prepared for him. Archie, in the meanwhile, amused himself by walking up and down at no great distance. True to his time, the clerk returned and just as he began to shake the handle of the door—which was fastened by a chain, and to which had been affixed a wire from the machine—off went the battery, and the first landing of the unfortunate attendant was on the pavement. As he lay sprawling and gasping, Archie, assisted by Mr Shade, seedsman (in the front of whose shop the affair occurred), came forward, and lifting up the clerk, began to abuse him for being "drunk like a beast at that time o' day." Dalrymple soon recovered and endeavoured to give an account of the curious sensation he felt, but Archie still persisted he was the worse of liquor. Rightly calculating on another visit, the Doctor again charged the machine, and he had scarcely done so, when Archie presented himself at the door. "Come in, Mr Campbell," cried the Doctor, and just as Archie applied to the handle, the unexpected shock of the electric battery sent him headlong down the steps, rolling on the pavement, where he lay for a few minutes quite insensible. Mr Shade and the clerk speedily came to his assistance; and as he began to recover from his stupor, the seedsman—who spoke with a horrid nasal twang—could not resist the opportunity of cracking a jest at his expense. "You sometimes accuse me of liking a glass, but I think the Doctor has giving you a tumbler." "No, Sir," cried Archie, as soon as he had recovered his speech, "He shot me through the shoulder with a horse pistol. I heard the report, by— Laddie, Dalrymple, do you see any blood? I take you both witness—." The occurrence soon became known in the Council Chamber. Next day one of the clerks, with affected seriousness, requested him to call on Mr Black about some trifling matter. "You and the Doctor may path go to the devil; do you want me to be murdered, Sir?" Never having heard of an electric battery at the Ronnoch Coliege, Archie was hard to convince that he had been assailed by any thing else than a horse pistol; and he could never again be persuaded to enter the premises of the Doctor."
